THE FIGURES ON ELECTION

How Marion County Is Put in the Wet Column.

WYANDOT COUNTY GIVES INSPIRATION

Both Sides Find Comfort in Wyandot County Returns.

Marion County Votes Dry 1,253 in 1908 and Wet 435 at This Election—Disgust of Voters with Blind Tigers and Bootlegging Leads to Polling of Vote in Favor of the Open Saloon.

Marion county, which went dry September 28, 1908, by a majority of [illegible],253, swung back into the wet column Wednesday, by a majority of 435. Naturally, the wets are jubilant today, while the drys are downcast.

Wednesday morning, and all day Wednesday, in fact, both sides appeared confident. It seemed as though both caught their confidence, in great part, from the Wyandot county returns. The drys argued that the fact that Wyandot county went wet by but 205, Tuesday, a change of but 257 from three years ago, clearly showed that sentiment had not changed up this way so greatly as along the Ohio river. The wets, on the other hand, saw Wyandot county as an agricultural community, its only village of any size—Upper Sandusky—being only a fifth the size of Marion. Wyandot made a change of voters of about 125, and they argued that Marion would show the proportionate gain, or better, while they would also gain in the country.

The results show the wets the better reasoners. But neither the wets this time, nor the drys the last, carried the election. Three years ago, the middle class became disgusted at the excesses of the saloonists and voted them out. Wednesday, the same class, even more disgusted with the blind tiger and the bootlegger, voted the saloons back, believing that the liquor people had [illegible] taught their lesson.

Figures in County.

To get back to figures, the total vote cast in the county, Wednesday, was 8,111. The forty-two precincts of the county gave the wets 4,273, and the drys 3,838, showing a falling off from three years ago of 558, of which the city's share was eighty-[illegible].

At the last preceding election the total vote was 8,669, of which the drys cast 4,961 and the wets 3,708, a dry majority of 1,253. In 1908 [illegible] it, and county outside the city [illegible] the majority in the city being 385 and the majority outside being 868. This year, the dry majority in the county fell to 220, which was [illegible] by the wet majority of 655 in the city, leaving a wet balance of [illegible].

The total vote cast in the city this year was 4,439 of which 1,892 were [illegible] drys and 2,547 by the wets. In 1908, the drys cast 2,454 [illegible] the wets secured only [illegible], a total of 4,523.

Drys Carry Twenty-Three.

Of the forty-two precincts of the county the drys carried twenty-[illegible], seventeen went wet [illegible] tied. Each side cast [illegible] ballots in Prospect [illegible] Salt Rock each cast [illegible] Of the dry precincts, all [illegible] losses. In this [illegible] total dry gain was but [illegible]. In the remaining nine-[illegible] the wets made a gain [illegible] ing a net gain of [illegible] county. With a few ex-[illegible] the marked gains came [illegible] of Marion.

[illegible] fourteen precincts in Ma-[illegible] six went dry, giving a [illegible] of 133. The remaining [illegible] precincts wiped out this and [illegible] majority in Marion [illegible] of 1,040 over three [illegible] Marion went dry by [illegible]

[illegible] villages of the county, [illegible] Waldo, followed Marion [illegible] column, the wet major-[illegible] being six. But while [illegible] still clung to the dry [illegible] made gains in all. [illegible] the drys losing six-[illegible] Richland, which went dry [illegible] twenty-one in Caledonia [illegible] voted twenty-six dry. [illegible] Green Camp, which the [illegible] fifty-one; twenty-five [illegible] which went dry thirty-[illegible] in Morral, which [illegible] twenty; one in New Bloomington, which went dry by [illegible]. Prospect was the only [illegible] to show a dry gain. It went [illegible] thirty-five, a gain of thirteen [illegible] three years ago.

MARION COUNTY TAKES A SLIDE

Thirst Emporiums Find Measure of Favor in County.

VERDICT OF VOTERS HAS BEEN RENDERED

Marion County Is Wet by a Majority of 435.

How the Returns Are Received by Both Sides—Scenes in Local-Option Headquarters, in Churches, on the Streets and in Other Localities—Side Lights on the Contest Closed Wednesday Night.

Marion County is wet again. If nautical terms will make appropriate figure of speech, the old ship, "Marion County," is once more afloat in "wetness." After a stay of three years in drydock, she was cut from the blocks, Wednesday, and plunged down the greased ways into her old element. The men, who had been at work on her for the three years past, were discharged, and the old moist crew again took possession.

And it goes without the saying that several bottles of moisture were broken over her bows, and band music was added to the rejoicing of the victorious.

The launching was not accompanied by quite so large a splash as had been hoped for by the most enthusiastic wets, but during the evening they rejoiced in the ripples of success, and then the crowds about the bulletin boards quietly dispersed and went home, each having his or her view of the matter, but all wets seemingly contented with the verdict, a substantial return of 435 majority favoring the re-establishment of the saloon as an institution in Marion.

It was a quiet and orderly crowd that watched the marking up of the verdict of its enfranchised citizenship three years ago when the drys carried the county by a total of 1,253. The people who received the verdict of Wednesday evening were no less orderly. Those who had no particular interest in the decision, those who found in the issue a great battle for right against wrong, and those who had visions of polishing up the bar in the morning and adding luster to the appurtenances thereof mingled freely, chatted without restraint and were good humored with each other, each making full allowance for weakness of his brother according to his point of view.

Watching the Boards.

In the mixture of humanity and multiplicity of interest that appeared before the bulletin boards, policemen of new-born authority, creatures of the hour, and policemen who have reason to regard themselves out of the amateur class mingled with the mass and grinned good naturedly when it was announced that Richland township had gone dry or Green Camp had registered a heavy vote for the wets. But all might have as well been at home and in bed so far as the need of police supervision was concernd.

During the day it was announced that returns would be received at various points in the city. Churches planned for returns where men and women interested deeply in the outcome might foregather for services, and at the same time be made acquainted with the results as they filtered in over the wires. Most prominent of those gatherings was the Epworth M. E. church where a heavy percentage of those who labored about the polling places throughout the day assembled to learn the results.

At the Y. M. C. A. building a bulletin board informed the young and old as to the outcome, and an unleashed crowd of young men, discarding everything but the promptings of youth, grew rather noisy in the street with cries of "Vote for us. We can not do it for ourselves."

At the local-option headquarters on Church street, a reporter dropping in felt like an icicle had been quietly slipped down his back. The returns were of course far from satisfactory, and many good people gathered there were bitterly disappointed. Every symptom of a revival of what was termed a lost cause from early in the evening was carefully digested, and many an eye was moistened with sorrow when the final result was announced.

Gathering of Interest.

The gathering at local-option headquarters was the most interesting in the city. A wealth of campaign literature in the windows screened the gathering from the outside observer, but the observer within found much that called for thought on moral issues. The reformed drunkard was there, vehement in his denunciation of the liquor traffic. The father of the wayward boy was there, hoping against hope that he might carry the news home that the county had gone dry and arguing that the removal of temptation was all that was necessary to the welfare of those he held dear. The professional dry man was there, dwelling on the hopes and sympathies of those who know what it is to lead a drunken father, son or brother home after a season of debauchery, and the minister who comes into the most intimate family secrets was there.

All counseled as to what should be done in the future and what should have been done in the past. All were deadly in earnest, and the expression was that if the saloon is to be tolerated in Marion, it must be a different saloon from that which caused it to be ostracised in the years that have past. One hopeful optimist silvered by the passage of some seventy years urged that the saloon was coming back to Marion purged of many of its evils and chastened by experience. He said he had faith in the common sense and business sagacity of the saloonist and expected the best regulated saloons that the city has ever known, a regulation born of a sense of self-preservation rather than of a fear of the present law of regulation. All found a morsel of consolation in one form or another except the man who had been known as his own worst enemy. He found the saloon wholly at fault and was anxious for revenge.

Receipt of News.

The places named were not the only places where the returns were received with interest. A certain bootlegger drew a black bottle out of a roll of asbestos in the back of the kitchen stove and sold his friend a drink for fifteen cents while the friend retailed the news that Marion had gone wet by over 600 as compared with going dry by 385 three years ago. The friend did not have the figures at his tongue's end, but this meant a change of over a thousand voters in their sentiments. A few minutes later, a local merchant holding a fair poker hand in a quiet game on north Main street laid it down face up for the observation of his fellow gamesters while in his excitement over the returns just received he exclaimed, "Well, I wonder what our preacher will think of that?"

A little girl who has been serving as a lookout for her mother carried the sad intelligence to her parent that "The jig is up, the town's gone wet," and the man who was buying a drink at the little kitchen bar saw its ending spelled in big letters. The child saw it first and the mother cried. The man who had bought the drink put the glass down on the oilcloth covered kitchen table without spilling its contents, left the price and went away—thinking.

Such are the various conditions under which the news of the local-option election were received.

Some Figures Given.

The bulletin board of Selby & Bogardus just under the headquarters of the board of elections was regarded by hundreds as the only official board in the city and was watched in its every detail with the greatest interest. The decision was final a few minutes before 8 o'clock and presented some interest-

COST OF THE MOBILIZATION

For Protection Along Mexican Border Made Public.

UNCLE SAM PAYS $1,730,526.72

The Biggest Expense Is for Transportation.

Approximately 16,000 Men Are Concerned in Movement in Texas and Cost of Supplies, Water and Sewers, Roads, Clothing, Shooting Galleries and Ranges Are Shown by Quartermaster's Report.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Cost of protective measures taken by the United States along the Mexican border last spring became known for the first time today with the publication of the annual report of Brigadier General J. B. Aleshire, quartermaster general of the army.

From March 6, when the orders for the mobilization were issued, to the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1911, the total expense was $1,730,526.72. This is almost the grand total for by June 30, a large part of the expense had been cut down.

For the single item of transporting troops and baggage and supplies to the Mexican border, by rail and water from all parts of the country, $891,436.72 was expended. Approximately 16,000 men were concerned in this movement. The total for transportation up to June 30, when the return movement had already begun, was $1,287,903.38.

Other items were—Regular supplies, $294,527; incidental expenses, $17,966; barracks and quarters, $29,864; water and sewers, $49,802; roads, walls, wharves and drainage, $2,500; clothing and equipage, $37,461; shooting galleries and ranges, $500.

General Aleshire states that the movement of troops to Galveston, San Diego and San Antonio, were executed promptly with the exception of the soldiers coming from Fort Snelling, Minnesota, and from Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming. He ascribes the delay at these points to congested traffic in the vicinity of the first and the isolated position of the second.

DISAPPROVES PEACE PACTS

Colonel Roosevelt Expounds His Own Ideas.

SOME QUESTIONS CAN NOT BE ARBITRATED

Especially Those Affecting the Honor of Nation.

It Would Not Be Merely Foolish, but Wicked for Us as a Nation To Argue To Arbitrate Any Disputes That Affect Our Vital Interests or Our Independence, Declares the Ex-President on Subject.

New York, Nov. 2.—Arbitration of every disputed question, even including questions involving the national honor, as advocated by President Taft, is disaproved by former President Roosevelt in a signed editorial in this weeks issue of a New York magazine.

"It would be not merely foolish, but wicked for us as a nation to agree to arbitrate any dispute that affects our vital interest or our independence or our honor," emphatically declares the former president. Colonel Roosevelt tells of the historic siege of Lille and of the offer of surrender of Marshal DeBouflers, to which the victorious Prince Eugene of Savoy replied, asking the vanquished leader to write his own terms of surrender, assuring him: "I shall change nothing, save in the case that something is put in contrary to my honor and to my duty."

"The attitude that the highly civilized nations of today can take toward one another," declares Colonel Roosevelt," when questions involving the possibility of war are at issue, should be in substance the same as the attitude that these two great and gallant soldiers took. A smaller man than Prince Eugene, or a bloodthirsty and ungenerous man, would never have written such a letter and thereby would have shown not only less generosity, but also in reality less wisdom; and on the other hand a weak or foolish manwho had attempted to act with similar generosity would probably have promised too much, and then found himself in the discreditable position of being obliged either to betray his country's interests or to go on his plighted word. Prince Eugene rendered a service to humanity; and in especial, by his deed in making good his word he advanced the standard of civilization conduct between enemies.

Memories Fail.

In proposing and in carryingout people should act in precisely this spirit. It is astounding to realize what short memories many persons have and the wilful blindness with which they close their eyes to the teachings of even the most recent history. But even when people are blind in the past, they ought to be able to see what is happening in the immediate present.

"Surely, the real friends of peace in this country ought to be able to profit by the events that have happened in China and in the Mediterranean during the fall months, since the arbitration treaty was considered in the senate. During these months we have seen widespread revolt in China, with utter disorganization of the empire, we have seen war unexpectedly break out between Turkey and Italy. In China, there has doubtless been much excuse for the revolt because of the tyranny and misgovernment, and this tyranny and misgovernment have been greater than in any really civilized nation although the Chinese have an army very much less efficient than that of any civilized power. The complete absence of militarism in China and China's effort to rely purely on pacific measures in dealing with all foreign powers have not only caused it to lose various provinces to various foreign powers within the last few decades, but have not had the smallest effect in saving it from tyranny, misgovernment, and the most far-reaching economic misery at home, and, moreover, have had the effect of depriving it of means even of keeping order within its own boundaries.

A Wicked Act.

"* * * * Turkey's treaties with various European powers explictly guarantee her integrity, * * * * and yet all the treaties thus guaranteeing her against dismemberment, are not worth as much as a single gunboat of the smallest size the minute that it becomes worth while for any serious opponent to attack her.

"It would be not merely foolish, but wicked for us as a nation to agree to arbitrate any dispute that affects our vital interest or independence or our honor because such an agreement would amount on our part to a covenant to abandon our duty, to an agreement to surrender the rights of the American people about unknown matters at unknown times in the future. Such an agreement would be wicked, if kept, and yet to break it—as it undoubtedly would be broken if the occasion arose—would be only less shameful than keeping it.

"* * * * If, as a people, we wish to make a genuine advance * * * * we should agree definitely to submit to arbitration all disputes that do not involve the vital interest, the independence or honor of the nation and we should at the same time make provision which will tend to bring about a pacific solution of all disputes not covered by treaty * * * *.

"On these two questions of duty and honor, the nation, if true to itself, can never be guided by any outside body and can pay heed only to its own conscience and its own sense of right; to fail thus to be guided would mean that it was recreant to its duty, not only to itself, but to the world at large."

KILLS MOTORMAN AS HE SLEEPS.

One of Most Inexplicable Murder Problems Faces Chicago Police.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—One of the most inexplicable murder problems the police have had to deal with in a long time developed here today when an intruder walked into the boarding house of John Quinn, sixty-four, a motorman, residing at No. 7150, Michigan avenue, and calmly shot Quinn through the heart as he lay sleeping.

Mrs. Quinn was so prostrated by the tragedy that she could not remember what the man looked like. He got away unpursued.

ARE WEDDED IN DEATH'S PAESENCE

"Death Is as Beautiful as Life," Says Pastor Who Ties Knot.

Harrison, N. J., Nov. 2.—"Death is as beautiful as ife. God has arranged both." So said Rev. William J. Tilery, pastor of Christ's Episcopal church last evening as he led Cordeia Harison and Walter Hayward into the dining-room of the Harrison home while the remains of the girl's mother lay fresh in death, in the parlor.

And so they were married.

ATROCITIES ARE LAID TO ARMY

Massacres by Italians in Tripoli Must Cease.

GERMANY WILL APPEAL TO POWERS

Manner of Butcheries Is Declared Most Terrible.

One Story Is That Italians Gather Fifty Men and Boys into an Enclosed Space and Pour Volley After Volley into Them—Picric Acid Bombs Used by the Invaders with Fiendish Glee.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—A movement of protest against reported Italian atrocities in Tripoli was started here today. Many prominent men and women are enlisting their services in the effort to secure combined action by the powers to prevent a continuation of the massacres which, it is declared, the army of occupation had been perpetrating ever since it landed in Turkish territory.

The manner of the butcheries is declared to have been beyond anything that modern civilization should permit. The story current today of the herding of fifty odd men and boys into an enclosed space in the outskirts of Tripoli, where soldiers surrounded them and poured volley after volley into the group until all had fallen, is cited as an instance of the kind of affair that should be stopped by force if necessary.

The fact is also pointed out here that however interesting scientifically the dropping of Picric acid bombs from aeroplanes into Arab encampments may be, it should be prohibited by the rules of civilized warfare. The Italian official version that Captain Gavotti dropped four such bombs into an encampment of 2,000 natives, "with excellent results," is regarded here with horror.

German sentiment has been strongly pro-Turkish from the first.

CHINESE SECTION IN MANILA DESTROYED

Fire Doing a Damage of More Than $1,000,000 Visits City.

Manila, Nov. 2.—A loss of more than $1,000,000 was occasioned here today by a fire which practically destroyed the Chinese section of the city. The fire threatened the central business section and the Twentieth infantry regiment, under General Funston, was sent to aid the firemen. The soldiers managed to bring the fire under control and confine it to the Chinese section.

TAFT REVIEWS FIGHTING SHIPS

Amid an Oratorio of Cannon Firing.

VESSELS BARK AS PRESIDENT COMES

Sending Out Courtesies to the Chief Executive.

The President, as Commander-in-Chief of Army and Navy, Is Assured, as He Watches Great Armada Pass, That Navy He Commands Is Second Only to That of Great Britain, Only in Numbers.

New York, Nov. 2.—Amid an oratorio of cannon firing, as tiny three-pounders roared the twenty-one gun salute to the commander-in-chief of the navy and the army of the United States, President Taft today reviewed the greatest armada Uncle Sam ever gathered together.

With the presidential pennant snapping in the chill morning air, the trim yacht, Mayflower, steamed through the mighty fleet, that President Taft might be assured, as Secretary Meyer was yesterday, that the navy he commands is second only to that of England—and second then only in numbers.

From the moment the presidential flag was broken out on the Mayflower until the armada received the order to "up anchor and pass in review," there was the constant barking of small guns as the customary courtesies were passed. New York hasn't heard such a cannonading since the days of the English.

Nor had New York ever witnessed such an impressive gathering of naval fighters. The palisades on the New York and New Jersey sides for miles were thronged with countless thousands who stood impressed by the almost magic panorama that was unfolded to them down in the broad stretches of the Hudson river.

It was just 7:20 when the president's private car arrived i Jersey City. A short time later the president was carried on board the Mayflower where he was breakfasted. There were no formalities connected with his boarding the yacht. It was not until breakfast had been completed that the formalities began.

Promptly at 9:30 the tiny guns on the Mayflower's forward deck cracked twenty-one times—a signal to the fleet that its commander-in-chief soon would visit and inspect it.

"Good Morning."

The Mayflower immediately headed up the river, while passing craft said "good morning" with fiendish shrieks from their sirens and fog-horns.

Off west Fifty-Seventh street, lying in toward the Manhattan side, was the grim Connecticut, flagship of the fleet, and home of its commander, Rear Admiral Osterhaus. The Mayflower went close alongside and lay to.

Just as though it hadn't all been prepared in advance, there was a sudden bustle on the Connecticut. The rear admiral's launch was sent over the side, while on the Connecticut's deck, gunners served the tiny saluting guns that paid the vessel's homage to the commander-in-chief. In full dress uniform, Rear Admiral Osterhaus and his flag lieutenant boarded his launch and sped to the Mayflower, where Admiral Osterhaus paid his respects to his commander. Then the division commanders followed.

The visit to the president was brief. Taft spoke a few words of praise for the sea fighters. The Admiral Osterhaus wene over the side, while the Mayflower's guns fired thirteen times—the rear admiral's salute. As the other division commanders departed, each received a thirteen-gun salute.

When all had gone, the president set out to return the calls of his subordinates. Owing to his limited time, he visited only the Connecticut where the flag officers were awaiting him on the quarter deck.

The president's visit lasted only a few minutes, and he went back to the Mayflower when the real saluting started.

As the Mayflower passed the Michigan, that vessel saluted and hardly had her twenty-one guns died away when the super-Dreadnought, Delaware, was wreathed in smoke as her guns began barking. Then the Dakota took up the firing and then the Louisiana and so, for miles, it went. When the battleships were passed, the cruisers took up the firing. Then diminutive torpedo boat destroyers and even smaller torpedo boats and submarines barked.

At the Fort Washington ferry the white yacht bore in toward the Manhattan side, turned south and sped down stream, each vessel repeating its salute.

He had been ill for only about 18 hours and until just before he died it was believed that the illness was only a slight indisposition. Death was caused by heart trouble caused it is believed by an attack of acute indigestion. Mrs Pulitzer arrived from New York and had been at her husbands bedside only about a half hour before his death.

Mr Pulitzer was 64 years of age. He had been in his usual health up to the time of the brief illness preceding his death. Last Wednesday he left New York on his yacht for a short cruise to the south intending to be back in New York for election day. He was accompanied by his youngest son Herbert 11.

Mr Pulitzer leaves three sons and two daughters Miss Edith and Miss Constance Pulitzer.

Mr Pulitzers father was a Hungarian Jew his mother a Catholic. He was born at Budapest on April 11 1847. During his childhood in Hungary he received some instruction from a private tutor which was the sum total of his schooling. Forty seven years ago he landed at Boston a tall, lean emigrant over six feet in height and came to New York with a 20 franc piece as his sole belongings. At the time of his death his wealth is estimated at more than $20 000 000.

Enlisted In Army

Soon after landing in Boston Mr Pulitzer enlisted in the Union army and served in the civil war. At the close of the war he landed in New York and finding nothing to do drifted to St Louis and did odd jobs on river boats for two years putting in his spare time studying at the public library. Finally he landed a $10 a week job as reporter on the Westliche Post. Just 10 years later he was able to buy the Dispatch and united the paper with the Post as the Post Dispatch which he owned until his death.

The new paper was successful and Mr Pulitzer then began to look toward New York. On May 10 188[illegible] he bought the New York World from Jay Gould. A presidential campaign was looming ahead and Mr Pulitzer launched into the fight to elect Grover Cleveland. During the campaign Tammany rewarded him with the nomination for congress from the Ninth New York district and he was elected. He resigned his seat in congress three months after his election gave his salary to charity and returned to his editorial work.

In 1886 he purchased the Park Row property where the Pulitzer building now stands. For more than a score of years he has been in the building but rarely only about two or three times but there has been no time when he has not been in intimate touch with the editorial and business departments of his properties.

AS A SHADOW FALLS UPON FAMILY NAME

And Sadness Grips Heart of Old Southerner

Father Tells of Sons Life from Time He Leaves Mothers Knee Bible in Hand To Go Forth To Preach the Gospel His Mothers Precepts and Love Clinging to Him Even to His Going to Jail

Boston Oct 30 Here is the first authentic story of the life of Rev Clarence V T Richeson the principal figure in the most remarkable poison mystery of a decade written by Thomas Varland Richeson of Rose Hill Virginia father of the accused clergyman.

The elder Richeson is the only person except the attorneys for the defence who has talked with the accused clergyman about the case since the arrest.

For the first time in the history of all the Richesons a shadow has fallen upon the family name said the aged southerner. I am an old man and have known an old mans portion of sorrow. It has been the sorrow for the death of loved ones. I went through four of the blackest years that this nation has known and any every man who fought upon the side of the lost cause can tell you they were black years indeed.

I have known the sadness caused by the disintegration of the family circle. All of this though it seems to me now is not to compare with the unhappiness which almost overwhelms me.

I love my boy but it is not my love for him now which stoutens my heart in this crisis. I am confident as to the outcome. I know there can be but one conclusion the acquittal of Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson.

A Mothers Precepts

Why I say this with such firm conviction is because I know that no Richeson could be guilty of a crime like this. Crime does not run in our blood.

The greatest consolation I have in this trying hour is the reflection that my boy is guiltless. When he went [from] home at the age of fourteen he took with him his Bible which had been a present from his mother. I remember the morning he left home. He told us all good by and kissed his mother last.

Mamma he said I will try with the help of God to follow all my life your example with all my heart and soul.

If there ever was a holy pure woman with a consecrated spirit it was my boys mother. When I saw my boy with the prison bars between us there was a family present but that [illegible] from [illegible] him the [illegible]

Strange people. He is accused of a crime that to my mind is unspeakable. I can realize the outcry that has been made against him. But I am his father and no man can raise his voice against my son or of Thomas Richeson without drawing from me a plea for fair play.

Inherits Mothers Love

I would like too to borrow the words of a famous American naval officer of another war. He said in a message to the people at the time of extreme tension suspend judgment. That is what I hope will be done in the first flush of this [illegible]

I think Clarence inherited from his mother his love for piety and truth. After the death of Clarences mother a letter which she had written me and intrusted to the care of a friend came to my hands. It was a message breathing a tender good by when she felt herself in the clutches of disease. It was her wish that I would find another mother for the younger children when she left. I have remarried.

I might tell also of that tragedy which came into Clarences life when his mother died in 18[illegible]. He was working in a St Louis factory by day and studying in school by night to prepare for the ministry. My other son Douglas was also in St Louis at that time.

With the death of their mother I drove a long distance to the telegraph station to wire them the news. The telegram was delayed. But these two boys just as soon as they had received the death notice made hurried plans to return to the old home.

Comes to Late

They arrived at Lynchburg which is the nearest large town to Amherst. They drove as hard as they could and entered the cemetery just as I was leading my motherless little ones away from the newly made grave.

into the wet column after a dry regime of three years. A hard and bitter contest was waged between the two factions since the filing of the wet petition four weeks ago with [illegible] per cent of the voters as signers.

Three years ago the county went dry by 1414. Nelsonville the largest city swung from 14[illegible] to 4[illegible]. Glouster with a population of [illegible]000 increased their wet majority from [illegible] to 28. Athens the county seat has reduced from 22[illegible] to 8[illegible] dry.

This result affects but only two townships out of the 14 [illegible] and York as the rest are all dry under the Beal law. A wet petition for the city of Athens will be circulated at once as they are confident of carrying it now.

Dry Majority Reduced

Pomeroy O Oct 30 Meigs county in the second election under the Rose county local option law decided to remain dry but by a greatly reduced majority from that of three years ago. According to [illegible] the majority is 78 and the wets concede a dry majority of [illegible] [illegible] into the [illegible] majority is against 8 for the drys in 1909. Pomeroy went wet by 44 as against 228 wet three years ago.

Refuse To Harm Women Who Would End Life

Lima O Oct 30—In an attempt to end her life while despondent Miss Anna Harter 30 leaped into a bear pit at the City park in which were confined two large black bears. The bears however refused to harm her and she was found in the pit some time later by Lee Stuckey a park attache. The bears attacked him when he went to the womans rescue and drove him from the pit. Returning with a hose he subdued the bears with a stream of water and dragged Miss Harter from the inclosure. She was numbed with cold and unable to stand.

TWO XENIA MEN KILLED BY TRAIN

Freight Train Plunges Through a Trestle East of Xenia

Xenia, O Oct 30—Two Xenia men Charles Figgins 50 and Harry Redmond 16 were killed when double header C H & D freight train No 94 went through a 50 foot trestle over Caesar creek six miles east of Xenia. James Powers half brother of Figgins escaped by jumping 50 feet and landing in mud and water at the edge of the creek. Redmond was crushed into a shapeless mass. Figgins was beneath the debris and drowned. Eighteen cars went into the creek taking with them the entire trestle.

BAPTIST DEACON IS UNDER ARREST

Wealthy Church Man Faces Charge of Arson

New Brunswick N J Oct 31—Ellis Appleby sixty a deacon in the Baptist church and reputed one of the wealthiest men in Middlesex county New Jersey was arrested Monday on a charge of arson and held in $5 000 bond by Judge Daly. Appleby stoutly denies the charge. He was accompanied to court by his wife who is said to be worth several hundred thousand dollars.

In the past two years there have been more than a dozen mysterious fires in the borough of Old Bridge about six miles from here where Appleby lives with his wife in one of the finest houses in the town. The specific charge against Appleby is that August 1 he set fire to the dwelling of Jessie Brown. The arrest was made at the instigation of the insurance companies which carried a policy on the Brown home.

ADA STUDENTS GLUED TO SEATS

Even President Smith's Chair Is Covered with Molasses

Ada O Oct 30—Molasses—of the stickiest variety that could be found—interrupted the course of higher education at the Northern Ohio university here.

When assembled for chapel services this morning nearly 1 000 student men and co-eds found chairs smeared with the glue like substance. About 100 sat down including President Smith whose chair behind the pulpit was covered. Most of the victims had to be pried loose.

President Smith ordered all male students to report at the chapel at noon with buckets and scrubbing brushes and while the place is being cleaned an investigation will be made.

posse left here today to search for the gang of robbers which pulled up the spikes and removed the rails in front of the Ft Worth & Denver express at Bellevue early this morning causing a wreck which resulted in the death of Engineer Cunningham and Fireman Yates and the injury of a score of passengers.

The accident occurred early this morning just as the express rounded a curve. The speed of the train had been slackened to pass through the yards otherwise it is probable that the death list would have been considerably larger.

Engineer Cunningham saw the gap in the rails and the obstructions which had been placed a short distance further on and tried to stop the train but failed. The engine and tender struck the end of the trestle and were hurled to one side. The baggage car and the passenger car also left the rails but did not turn over. The sleeping passengers in the other cars were shaken up.

Cunningham was found buried under the debris of his engine. Yates was badly burned and suffered from internal injuries from which he died a short time later.

Investigation proved that two of the rails had been removed and several railroad ties chained to the railroad tracks so that the wreck of the train was inevitable. A posse was formed and a search for the wreckers begun.

A Political Genius

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, as he had not managed to make himself a power in congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said You live near the center of the United States don't you? Yes. Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district? The congressman introduced the bill and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next congress and although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

which will be of vital interest throughout the state has been made by Attorney General Hogan in construing the Kimble corrupt practices act.

In his ruling the attorney general holds that it is unlawful for any political committee or candidate for a political office to hire carriages, wagons or other vehicles to convey voters to the polls and that it is also unlawful for any person or party to make any donation or contribution either by the giving of money or the gratuitous offering of such conveyances for such a purpose.

Attorney General Hogan interprets the law to absolutely prohibit anything of the kind. He however holds that the law does not prevent a neighbor or a friend from driving a voter to the polls who might be physically incapacitated from going there. He points out that the whole purpose of the law is to prevent corruption in elections and is not to prevent any voter from exercising his just rights and privileges.

If the owner of a vehicle should invite another to jump in and ride to the polls with him that would not be a violation of the corrupt practices act unless it could be shown that the purpose of the invitation was to influence the vote of the person accepting the same.

and tobacco decisions. To these, he later added speeches on conservation and the necessity for improvement in agriculture. These seven have embraced every speech he has made on the trip.

Grows Emphatic

His early utterances on the trusts were rather conservative but as the trip progressed he went further and further on this point until when he reached Chicago after the governments suit against the Steel trust had been filed he announced unqualifiedly that the law must be enforced.

One speech that has aroused great enthusiasm on the trip is that of peace. Everywhere that the president has spoken on this subject, it has been well received and his supporters claim that he has converted some dozen senators who were originally opposed to the French and British arbitration treaties pending in the senate.

Politically the result of the presidents trip remains to be written in the electoral college in 1912. But political sharps all along the route have generally agreed that Taft has succeeded in fixing the attention of the people he has talked to on the next session of congress. He has promised tariff reform at the next session and in the accomplishments of the winter it is generally conceded he must look for the verdict of the people. No open hostility has shown itself on the trip but in the states of Kansas Iowa Nebraska, Idaho Washington Oregon California South Dakota Minnesota and Wisconsin an undercurrent of the show me attitude was apparent. In these states Republican insurgency is making its fight.

From now on the president will be in the East twelve days more the White House will be cavorting about on wheels. Pittsburgh tomorrow Morgantown West Virginia, the next day New York for the big naval review November 2 a few days at Hot Springs Virginia for a rest, and then the president will campaign in Kentucky and Tennessee, after spending election day at home in Cincinnati. It will be November 12 before the president reaches the White House again and then he will have been on the road fifty-seven days. He will then have but about two weeks to prepare for the opening of the long session of congress.

TEACHERS TO GATHER IN CINCINNATI SOON

Miss Lucia May Wiant on Program Arranged.

A number of local teachers and Superintendent Henry A. Hartman will attend the meeting of the Centrall Ohio Teachers' association to be held in Cincinnati November 10 and 11. A fine program has been arranged for the sessions. Miss Lucia May Wiant, teacher of elecution and physical culture in the Dayton schools, but a resident of this city, is on the program. She will speak of the educational value of poetry.

Prisoners Released.

Five prisoners against whom the grand jury failed to return indictments were released from the county jail by the sheriff, Monday afternoon. They are Charles Kling, who was charged with resisting an officer; Ira Slocum, assault; W. L. Kuntz, forgery; Michael Shea, aiding a prisoner to escape, and Albert Patton, burglary.

An Unusual Case.

The three-year-old daughter of John Snyder, of Waldo, suffered a stroke of paralysis, Saturday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock, as a result of which she has lost the use of her left arm. The child suffers no pain, but is entirely unable to control the member. The physicians who were summoned pronounced the case a very unusual one.

Cushion covers, especially designed for piazza use, come stencilled in most artistic designs, and may be had in a variety of colors. They are in denim, crash, burlap, monks' cloth and linen.

TROTTER UNDER SUSPICION SOLD FOR $5,000.

PROFESSOR SPHINX 2:11¼

Thomas W. Murphy's purchase of Professor Sphinx, 2:11¼, for something like $5,000, while horsemen in New York and vicinity were discussing the question as to whether the sensational chestnut trotter was a ringer, caused some surprise last week. Some fair offers were made for him by New York horsemen when the green one won two purses of $1,000 each in three days at Mineola L. I., a month ago, shortly after having earned a record of 2:11¼ at Allentown, Pa.

A QUEENLY WOMAN.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for November 5 Is, "Esther Pleading for Her People." Esther 4:1; 5:3.

This is the "woman lesson" of the year, the story of beautiful Esther, whose patriotism saved a people. The book of Esther is of interest in this day of unrest concerning the status of woman. The absurd masculinity of the royal decree sent out after Vashti's rebellion, that all wives might be taught to obey their husbands, will not escape the shafts of feminine wit, as this lesson is studied by millions of persons.

In truth, the whole story reeks of ancient and oriental man-sway. In its light we perceive how far the lot of woman has improved. While there is nobleness, to be honored and emulated, in the conduct of both the deposed Persian, Queen Vashti, and of her successor, the lovely Jewess, Queen Esther, neither woman may be taken for an example today. A moment's thought concerning Esther's real state and standing in the harem of Xerxes will show how utterly odious it would be for a modern Christian woman. Teachers should be careful how they advise young people to be Esthers.

The incident in ancient history is a fair starting place for a frank discussion of the fundamental issues of what we term "the woman question." Shrewd students will not overlook the fact that today woman's place has become a question; it was unquestioned a generation ago. Whether woman is to be, as was Esther's lot, the mere toy of man's caprice, the suppliant charmer, the bedizened beguiler, holding admiration by every art of dress and adornment; or whether she is to be the confidant, comrade and counsellor of man, and his accepted spiritual mentor and inspiration, are fair and timely themes for consideration in this connection. In this Esther story there is revealed a luminous strain of persisting femininity, both as to frailty and strength. Her womanly wiles, however, are condoned in a contemplation of her womanly strength. In a crisis, it is usually the woman who displays spiritual heroism.

Persia, Then and Now.

Every tale must be read in the light of its time. We must take down our ancient Greek histories as commentaries upon this lesson. Xerxes, or Ashuerus, was ruler of the world. He was contemplating the invasion of Greece, a vain attempt that has made Marathon and Thermopylae familiar words. His word was law to uncounted millions. Persia was then the greatest power on earth. Today it is one of the meanest. "Ichabod" may be written over it. The glory is even departing from the Persian rug industry, owing to the use of aniline dyes.

Perhaps I have a grudge against Persia, for, after the snow in the upper passes had blocked a visit to Teheran in the early part of this year, not to mention the question of the time involved, I was not even permitted to visit the ruins at Susa, which is the Shushan of this story, and Persepolis, where the ancient Persian kings had their capital. The bandits are in such complete control of this part of Persia that the consuls will not permit foreigners to risk their lives by entering.

It was at Susa that the French archaeologist, De Morgan, made several sensational finds, including the famous code of Hammurabai, a collection of laws of the time of Abraham. This inscribed stone was almost as great a blow to the high foreheads of the critics as David's pebble was to Goliath; for in their sapiency they had been assuring the world that in the time of Moses society was not sufficiently organized to have such a complete set of laws as the ten commandments and the Levitical code. Now the critics who are casting doubt on the story of Esther may be confounded by the discovery of a copy of Ahashuerus' decree, or of Mordecai's seal. This is the very sort of thing the achaeologists are digging up; and I myself have samples which I got in Babylonia.

When the Bagdad railway gets to running many of us may take the short trip across the Persian gulf and see the ruins at Susa of the palace where this drama of Esther was enacted. Then we shall better realize the autocratic authority and the opulent magnificence of the court in which the beautiful young Jewess found herself a potent figure. Reading history on the spot, and amid persisting oriental conditions, we may appreciate afresh the absolute power of an oriental despot. Sust is a long way from London or Washington, or other capital of a constitutional form of government.

Palace Intrigues.

One of the best commentaries on the book of Esther is a good picture of life in an oriental palace, as the recent work by Bland and Backhouse, "China Under the Empress Dowager." One must understand the constant atmosphere of intrigue and sycophancy amid which an oriental monarch lives in order to comprehend the sudden rise of Haman, and his more sudden fall, with Mordecai's elevation. The best key to the present news from China is some knowledge of the palace intrigues in Peking.

"Face" is more than life in the East. Haman, the chief favorite of the king, lost "face" when Mordecai, the Jew at the gate, would not kowtow to him. Therefore he plotted a truly Oriental vengeance, not only upon Mordecai, but upon his family and race as well. All of this is clear and comprehensible and natural to any reader "East of Suez." The most occidental phase of the story is the sturdy old Jew's independence, and his confidence that his people would somehow be saved from vengeance, even though his enemy did possess the king's signet ring.

Let us tarry a moment to cheer for Mordecai, the loyal. He stood by the king, he stood by the little girl dependent upon him, he stood by his people, he stood by his self-respect, he stood by Jehovah. He was true to his home folk with that chivalrous loyalty which is in a peculiar measure a tradition of the South. The Jews have also had it always. To this day the sense of racial unity binds the poor Jews in Persia and Palestine with wealthy Jewish bankers in New York and Paris and London. Loyalty is often a greater virtue than love, indeed, it is an essential part of true love; for, as Shakespeare says, "Love is not love which altereth when it alteration finds."

A Woman's Mission.

The mad hate of Haman imperilled the lives of all Jews. Closer than he to the king stood the beautiful favorite, Esther; whom Ahasuerus did not know to be a Jewess. We may not think of Esther in terms of a modern wife in a Christian land. She was but one of many wives of a fickle and dissolute monarch, albeit the favorite member of his harem. The intimacy and confidence of the western husband and wife were undreamed of. Esther at first feared to approach the king in behalf of her people; she took her life in her hand if she approached the king without being sent for. A similar story is told in connection with Abdul Hamid, of Turkey.

The highest use of life is not merely to live. Sometimes life has been best employed when it has been thrown away. That is the hero message from history, with the cross as the chief example. Cried Esther, "If I perish I perish"—as a woman, a Jewess and a queen; which is far better than to live as a fearful and remorseful slave. When her meaner side is touched woman can be small and spiteful and frivolous; but when her nobler nature is appealed to she reveals a capacity for heroism superior to man's. This best aspect of woman is the truer to her real nature. To cite instances of the noble courage and fearless self-sacrifice of womanhood, in illustration of the Esther story, would be merely stressing the obvious. The young queen could dare her king's wrath, and risk her own life, for the sake of a great loyalty and a great ideal. We think none the less of her that she employed her womanly wiles to accomplish her purpose.

Vain has been this study of one of the Old Testament hero tales if it has not fired hearts with the purpose to do some service for race and religion. In addition to living one's own true life, one should seek to serve the time and the world, "his day and generation" as the old phrase has it, in larger, deeper ways. The Briton should do something distinctively for the Empire; the American for his country; and both for world brotherhood. Write a poem or a book, a song or a sermon, do a self-forgetting deed, labor for some great ideal; belong effectively to some national or world-movement; give and pray for the biggest cause you know; in some way it is posible for the least of us to follow Esther's example in serving her own people.

Hanged High as Haman.

Boastful Haman, still true to the oriental type, recited to his family and his parasites the honors that had come upon him. He basked in their adulation and flattery. And in their hearing he made boasts of vengeance upon his enemy, Mordecai. Sure of his status at court, he built a high gallows for the Jew, so that his honor might be avenged.

There is no better caution than "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Also there is a proverb about falling into the pit one has digged for another. The esential difference between Haman and Mordecai was that one was a small and corrupt man, though high, and the other was a great and honorable man, though obscure. John Randolph Stidman has a pertinent poem:

"After all, and after all,
Since ever the world began,
Just two have lived, and two have died,
In lowly mien, in lordly pride,
The rogue and the honest man
"After all, and after all,
The classes are but two;
And both are rich and both are poor,
And both still know, as they knew before
The things that they ought to do
"After all, and after all,
Escape it we never can;
Only the choice of one have we,
And you must be and I must be
A rogue or an honest man."

At one and the same time Haman sought his own elevation and his enemy's downfall. He really secured the reverse. Mordecai was made first before the king, and Haman was hanged on his own gallows. It is such instances of poetic justice as this—and they are not infrequent—that reminds us that
"Still, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,

POLICE COURT.

John Walsh, against whom an affidavit was filed several months ago on a charge of bootlegging, and who disappeared before he was arrested, was taken into custody, Monday evening, by Chief Klinefelter. Walsh evidently had a horror of confinement and was not long in gaining his freedom. He was first taken to the city prison, where the chief intended locking him up. On reaching the prison, Walsh informed the chief that he could give bond.

Chief Klinefelter was not desirous of putting Walsh behind the bars if he could arrange matters satisfactorily for his appearance, and took Walsh to headquarters to make the necessary arrangements for his release. The chief communicated with the mayor, and then received a long-distance call. While he was talking over the phone, Walsh made his exit and took to his heels. The warrant is still pending and has been read to Walsh and should he be apprehended he will be placed behind the bars while making arrangements for a bondsman.

The forestry service is conducting active warfare against wolves, coyotes, wildcats and similar predatory animals.

PERRY DENNIS IS CONFINED IN JAIL

Arrested at Columbus on Paternity Charge.

On a paternity charge made in the court of Justice Charles E. Gompf by Miss Norma Pfeifer, Perry Dennis was arrested in Columbus, Monday, by Constable Benjamin Bigford and was given a hearing Monday evening at 7 o'clock. Justice Gompf held Dennis to the common pleas court in the sum of $400. Dennis was unable to furnish the bond and was sent to jail.

Miss Pfeifer is a daughter of Mrs. Mary Pfeifer, of this city, and had been employed in the same upholstering establishment in Columbus in which Dennis was employed.

"Hey, there!" called an old farmer to a man on the corner—and three grass widows stopped and looked around.

MARION WEEKLY STAR.

SATURDAY - - NOVEMBER [illegible]

MARION VOTES WET LET IT BE DECENTLY SO

When Marion county voted dry three years ago the first utterance of the Star the following day was an admonition for the supremacy of the law of the majority. The Star would write the same admonition today though under very opposite conditions. Perhaps we should change the expression [illegible] the dry forces have never sought to nullify the law. What the Star wants to make emphatic today is a new consecration to law observance and the admonition [illegible] addresses [illegible] is [illegible] dry [illegible] addressed to the drys because the same interest in law enforcement applied to regulation as that shown in attempted prohibition will make for temperance and minimize the evils of the saloon. It is addressed to the wets because in the restoration of the legalized saloon we want to see an improvement over the outlawed tiger and we want to see the advocates of the open saloon make good in their promises of the elevated saloon, the institution that recognizes the law and joins in its enforcement. We are not urging the saloon interests to make their new lease of life permanent. There is and can be no argument for the permanency of the saloon. No logical wet could ever say more than urge the tolerated and regulated saloon as a traffic that resists suppression rather than the offending outlawry of bootlegging establishments. The wets have their chance now to make good. We are curious to see if all the fair promises, repentance and good resolutions are worth the breath used in uttering them. Years ago after a city local option fight when the wets were given a vote of tolerance every promise of good behavior was forgotten before the vote was officially announced. Therein lies the partial explanation of the great dry victory which followed a year later. A similar contempt for honor and decency will lead to a greater dry victory at the first possible voting day. We should like to see the wet advocates and saloonists themselves committed to exacting regulation. We should like to see such a commendable attitude of the wets supported and strengthened by renewed vigilence on the part of the drys and where everybody favors law enforcement there will be effective law enforcement.

It would be silly to write that business will be improved except that business which is of the traffic in intoxicants. Perhaps a few dollars that have been drifting to wet territory will find lodgement at home but the increased expenditure for drink taken from the regular channels of trade will far exceed the few dollars kept at home by the legalized saloon. What depression has been felt in business is more the result of the divided Marion spirit rendered in the first conflict and this result will not restore it. These things can only be restored gradually in fuller harmony.

It is difficult to assign a specific reason for the decided change of sentiment. For one thing as in major politics there is the ebb and flood of the tide of popular opinion. The dry wave was at the flood three years ago and there is an indisputable ebb just now whether the fact is agreeable to contemplate or not. Looking over the [illegible] returns there is an apparent diminution of dry sentiment in all but five precincts in the county and the dry gain in these is insignificant. The wet gains are of course largely in the city of Marion, all precincts but one showing heavy changes favorable to the wets. In Third ward D the wet gain was nearly 200 and First ward B and C precincts and Second [illegible] and C, Third C and Fourth A showed gains close to a hundred each. Pleasant township showed a big wet gain but it is not significant but one wonders at Grand Prairie, purely agricultural, bordering on the wet lands of Crawford county showing a wet gain of more than a half hundred. Grand Prairie evidently likes its nip and prefers to buy it in Marion.

It will not do to charge the result to waning convictions about the curse of intemperance. More likely it is due to the gang interest first evident in the stay at home vote that was cast dry three years ago and a change of ballots due to dissatisfaction over the impotence to stop determined bootleggers.

In contemplating the reopening of legalized saloons it will be well to turn to the new Dean law. That law designed and promoted by the liberal forces to elevate the saloon and drive out and keep out the outlaws in the business makes a clean bill essential to qualify for a state tax receipt. It is within the authority of the county auditor to refuse a tax receipt to any applicant convicted of crime. It will be well to try out the new Dean law at the very beginning of legalized saloons.

At any rate let us repeat the admonition to wets and drys alike to join in law enforcement to the end that the saloon traffic shall be the least menace possible. The wets have declared for law respecting observance of regulating statutes. The drys must recognize the wisdom of guarding against evils in regulation for the popular verdict is against prohibition. Let Marion start square toed. Meanwhile the cause of temperance no longer partially supported by attempted prohibition can and will be promoted by teaching and moral suasion and we hope by influential example.

ing facts

To begin with there were dry gains over the election of 1908 in five precincts. The largest gain was made in Prospect village where the gain reached a total of thirteen. Next in order was Montgomery West where the drys gained five and in Claridon North where the dry gain was [illegible]. In Third B and in Montgomery East the drys gained one, a total of twenty five for the precincts named as compared with the entire county. The total wet gain for the county was 1,688 indicating a change in sentiment of 844 votes. It was freely predicted that if the county went wet it would be due to the city but the county bears its full measure of responsibility for wet gains. Three precincts in Marion made heavy wet gains. Five or six might be considered but three went above the century mark. What influence was lent to the vote is unknown but the three precincts referred to harbored some of the worst bootleggers in the business. Precinct P of the Third ward had a dive at which boys and girls of the High school age were welcomed without restriction but the keeper of the dive was frightened into leaving the city a short time before the election and the precinct made a gain [illegible] even for the open [illegible]. A professional gambler and [illegible] reporter were responsible for this [illegible] keeper quitting the [illegible].

Some Surprises

The wets seeking to legalize the open [illegible] and wishing to eliminate the blind tiger were given a surprise in at least two instances. They made gains but the gains were not equal to expectations. At Caledonia where the law was flagrantly violated by Tom Dick and Harry where it mattered not whether the booze was retailed from the third stall on the left hand side of a stable or from the rear end of a dining place, the town gained twenty one on the side of the open thirst parlor but the vote was ninety one for and seventy three against the sale of intoxicating liquor.

LaRue stood 127 and ninety three for and against the sale of liquor within its precincts, a gain of twenty five for the adherents of the thirst emporiums. The wets expected a heavy gain because of local conditions and got a measure of it. The bootlegging conditions in LaRue were remarkable to say the least. A local bootlegger was able to replenish his supply at LaRue when it was regarded dangerous for him to bring it in from other sources.

The Villages

Green Camp, Morral and Waldo each gave substantial gains for the wets and proved as big a surprise as Prospect with a dry gain of thirteen. Green Camp voted sixty nine to eighteen against the traffic but that was a gain of eighteen for the liquid exponents. A heavy stay at home vote at Green Camp and many other points had its effect on the results.

However whatever may have been responsible for the radical change of sentiment in the county, whether it was a desire for an enlargement of opportunity to secure that which was forbidden under the local option restrictions or whether it was simply a freak of the desire of the voter, the county has been voted wet and must remain so for the next three years so far as the present law is concerned and subject to constitutional amendments.

In 1908 the county voted 4,961 dry and 3,708 wet. In 1911 the county voted 4,2[illegible]3 wet and [illegible] dry. In this election 844 voters changed their views from those expressed in the election of 1908.

A CALEDONIA LODGE ENTERTAINS COMPANY

Halloween Affair Proves Pleasant for All

TIME IS GIVEN TO SOCIAL DIVERSIONS

Miss Nettie Ault and Mr Emerson Coulter Are United in Marriage at the M E Parsonage at Caledonia. Village Notes Gathered During Past Few Days

Caledonia O Nov [illegible] [Special.]

The Pythian sisters entertained their families and the Knights of Pythias and their wives at a Halloween party in the lodge room Tuesday evening. About 1[illegible]0 guests were entertained during the evening. The hall was decorated with black cats, cornstalks and pumpkin faces and one corner of the room was curtained off. There Wonderland was displayed. The room contained everything conceivable from a red heart souvenir to the old lady who lived in a shoe. A program was rendered early in the evening. Mrs A E Jackson as Marguerite Eliza Hockler with her family of sixteen children furnished much amusement as she recited the experience of her fifteen years abroad. The witches drill was equally interesting. K P Meister sang one of his pleasing solos and little Garnet Hams gave a selection. A piano solo by Miss Mabel Harrison and a duet by the Harruff sisters concluded the program. A supper suggestive of the ocasion followed. The remainder of the evening was decorated to social amusements. Miss Bliss Hipsher won the first prize for ladies and A E Jackson for men in the contest of pinning a tail on the donkey. The only out of town guests were Mrs John Stafford of Marion, Miss Grace Rosencrans of St Paris Illinois.

Emerson Coulter son of Mr and Mrs William Coulter who resides several miles south of town and Miss Nettie Ault who has made her home with Mr and Mrs Lawrence Douce for the past few years were united in marriage at the M E parsonage Sunday evening. Rev C A R Edgington performed the ceremony. Bruce Coulter a brother of the groom and Miss Clara Bolinger attended the young people. Mr Coulter is a young school teacher at present employed near Claridon. They will reside with the groom's parents this winter.

Mr and Mrs Thomas Warner and children of Upper Sandusky were the guests of relatives here Sunday and Monday.

Mr and Mrs Joseph Slagle of near Cardington visited with Mr and Mrs S J Doyle Monday.

Mrs Maude Carr and Miss Argyl Decker were the guests of Marion friends several days last week.

Mrs Iore Cardiff spent Friday and Saturday with her aunt in Columbus.

Mrs Louise Dunton and son George of Marion spent Sunday as guests at the M E parsonage.

Mrs A M Dilts and Mrs Sue K Burt entertained the members of their Sunday school classes at a party in the church parlors [illegible] Thursday evening. The room was decorated with jack o lanterns and bouquets and for several hours the young people made merry with laughter and games. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Miss Marvel Wilson was hostess to the New Ideal club and a party of friends at her home just east of town Saturday evening. The home was tastefully decorated with Halloween suggestions and the guests were merrily entertained with various games. A luncheon was served by the hostess who was assisted by her sister. Thirty five guests were present.

Mrs Ella Strawman has had her house on south Main street repainted and repapered and will take possession at once.

Mr and Mrs Joseph Slagle of Hepburn were the guests of relatives here the first of the week.

The Misses Alice Wallace and Ada Modd of Kenton and John Fields of Ada were the guests of Mr and Mrs Mathew Fields Monday. Rev and Mrs C A R Edgington, Mrs Sue K Burt, Mrs Etta Ulsh and Miss Laura Garber composed an automobile party who motored to Waldo Friday and attended the convention.

Last Friday evening as James Hummer was driving home from town his rig collided with one driven by Had Rice and son Eugene who were going in the opposite direction. The accident occurred just north of town. Mr Hummer's horse tore loose from the buggy and ran several miles to his home. The front of his closed buggy was broken. A wheel of Mr Rice's buggy was also broken but the occupants of both conveyances were unhurt.

Mrs James Mikeever and children Francis Elizabeth and Margaret of Marion were the guests of Mr and Mrs M V Neal Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs Isabelle Underwood and daughter Miss Virginia were the guests of Cardington friends Saturday and Sunday.

KIRKPATRICK HOME, SCENE OF WEDDING

[illegible] Edna Rowe and Mr. D. C. Alexander.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. [illegible] Kirkpatrick was the scene of a simple but beautiful wedding [illegible] at high noon, Sunday, when their daughter, Miss Hazel Edna [illegible] was united in marriage to Mr. Dice C. Alexander, of Ada. A [illegible] company composed chiefly of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Mr. Keeran, of the Christian church. Immediately following the ceremony, a six-course wedding dinner was served.

Both the bride and groom are well and favorably known at Kirkpatrick and over Marion county. The groom is a son of Dr. R. C. Alexander, of Wyandot county and is employed as a drug clerk.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander left on a wedding journey to visit relatives of the groom at Lewistown, and upon their return they will make their home in Ada.

REBEKAH LODGES OF DISTRICT HOLD MEETING

Tenth Annual Convention Is Held at Waldo.

TEN LODGES INCLUDED IN TENTH DISTRICT

Much Business Is Given Attention and Officers Are Elected for the Ensuing Year—The Next Convention Will Be Held at Prospect. Candidates Get Degree.

The tenth annual convention of the Rebekah lodges of the Thirty-Ninth district was held at Waldo, Friday afternoon and evening, more than 200 being present at the sessions. Of the ten lodges in the district, every lodge with the exception of the LaRue lodge was well represented.

The session was opened at 1 o'clock with music and prayer. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Ellen Miller, of Waldo, and was responded to by Mrs. Fred Fatzler, of Wayside Rose lodge of Marion. Addresses were made by Mrs. Eva Curl, president of the Ohio Rebekah assembly, of Cardington, and Mrs. Emma Bell, secretary of the Ohio Rebekah assembly, of Columbus.

"The College Oil can" was the subject of a recitation delivered by Mrs. Clara Edgington, of Caledonia. Echoes from the Ohio Rebekah assembly were given by the delegate to the assembly, Mrs. L. R. McNeil, of Prospect.

Following the program the business session was held. The secretaries of the lodges reported and Prospect was selected as the place for holding the convention next year.

The officers for the year were elected as follows: Mrs. Rose Thoms, of Prospect, president; Mrs. Cathryn Evans, of Sosnowski Rebekah lodge, of Marion, vice president; Miss Emma Snyder, of Prospect, secretary; Mrs. Anna Huff, of Prospect, treasurer; Mrs. Vinnie Selanders, of Waldo, conductor; Mrs. Margaret Miller, of Wayside Rose lodge, of Marion, inside sentinel; Mrs. Louise Barnthouse, of Agosta, outside sentinel; Mrs. Carrie Welch, of Sosnowski lodge, of Marion, warden; Mrs. Clara Edgington, of Caledonia, chaplain. Mrs. Eva Curl, of Cardington filled the chair of the installing officer.

At the close of the afternoon's session, supper was served by the Waldo lodge, covers being laid for ninety-one. In the evening the past grand degree was conferred on a class of thirty-seven. Two candidates were initiated by the degree team from Sosnowski Rebekah lodge, of Marion.

Marion Council, No. 671, Knights of Columbus, one of the most progressive fraternal organizations in the city, has closed a deal with the Huber estate for a five-year lease of the north half of the fifth floor of the Huber building, on west Center street, the rooms to be used for lodge and club rooms for the order.

The new quarters will provide a large lodge room with a reading room, billiard parlor and library in connection, also cloak and toilet rooms conveniently situated, while the many large windows will make the rooms the best ventilated lodge rooms in the city. The floor of the lodge room will be placed in fine shape for dancing and will be sufficiently large for the social events of the order. The rooms are now being decorated. As soon as they are completed and nicely furnished, the council expects to move and have the formal opening of the new quarters by the initiation of a large class of candidates. A schedule of social affairs for the winter season will also be arranged.

YOUNG PEOPLE ARE JOINED IN MARRIAGE

Miss Nancy Jane Brook and Mr. Harry E. Dorfe.

Miss Nancy Jane Brook and Mr. Harry E. Dorfe, both of this city, were united in marriage by Dr. C. R. Havighurst at the Epworth M. E. parsonage, Saturday evening at 7 o'clock. The ring ceremony was performed in the presence of a company of the friends of the young people.

Mr. and Mrs. Dorfe will reside in Marion.

ARKANSAS ON WHEELS ARRIVES IN MARION

Train of Eleven Coaches Advertising Arkansas.

FOUR CARS ARE USED FOR EXHIBIT

The Other Seven Cars Are Occupied by the 150 Members of the Party, All of Whom Are Most Enthusiastic Boomers of the Big Southwestern State.

"Arkansas on Wheels," the special train over the Big Four railroad announced recently, arrived in Marion Saturday at 9 o'clock and was stationed here until shortly before 10 o'clock. The special is being run for the purpose of advertising Arkansas and the exhibit in the eleven coaches which composed the train was without question the most elaborate and interesting ever seen by Marion people.

The special was greeted by a good sized crowd upon its arrival here, and a band played a number of selections which attracted many more. The band accompanied the train on its trip. Near the State street crossing the train was stationed for the accomodation of the people who in large numbers passed through the coaches where the displays of grain, fruit, vegetables, iron ore and practically everything that is found in Arkansas were inspected. Business men, lawyers, real estate men, farmers and men of all classes together with a number of enthusiastic ladies told the visitors of the opportunities in Arkansas and distributed literature. One Catholic priest, Father Galleher, accompanies the train.

The special left Arkansas on October 20, and has stopped at all of the leading cities enroute here. It has stopped at all of the cities enroute from Arkansas through Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Friday the train was at Canton, and there the party took up a collection amounting to $10 and placed a wreath on the tomb of the late William McKinley. On its trip the special is to cover 2,500 miles, going through seven states.

On board the train are 150 people and there are special accomodations for their pleasure on the trip. It is the second special of its kind run from Arkansas, and those in charge are highly enthusiastic with the success of the trip thus far. The train is composed of four baggage cars and seven coaches. Those containing the exhibits, proper, bear flaming banners advertising the purpose of the special. One of them reads "Arkansas Needs Only You."

C. S. Blackman, formerly of this city, is in charge of the train.

The special Saturday made stops at Bellefontaine and Sidney after leaving here.

WILLIAM BAIRD DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Deceased Passes Most of His Life in Marion County.

Caledonia, O., Oct. 28—[Special.]—William Baird, aged seventy-one years, residing three miles east of here, died of a complication of diseases at his home, Friday evening at 10 o'clock after a lingering illness.

Mr. Baird was born in Marion county, January 17, 1840, the son of Peter and Nancy Baird, who settled in the county in 1838. He resided in the county all of his life with the exception of two years which he spent in Vermillion county Illinois. In 1874 he was united in mariage to Miss Nancy Christie, who died seventeen years ago. Nine children all of whom, with the exception of one who died in infancy, survive. They are Breece, Jay and Wellington Baird, Mrs. L. J. Douce, Mrs. Merrill Douce and Mrs. John Warwick, of Caledonia, Mrs. W. J. Weiser, of east Center street, Marion, and Grover Baird, of Fowlersville, Michigan.

The funeral services will be held from the family residence, Monday morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Galbreath, of Iberia, officiating. Interment will be made in the Caledonia cemetery.

MISS SARAH LARUE DIES IN COLUMBUS

She Falls a Victim to Tuberculosis Friday Night.

Miss Sarah LaRue, aged sixteen years, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David LaRue, of near LaRue, died of tuberculosis in St. Anthony's hospital in Columbus, Friday night. The remains were brought to this city, Sunday morning at 10:15 o'clock, and were taken to the home of the deceased's brother, Delroy LaRue, at No. 528 south Prospect street, where a private funeral was held, Monday morning, at 10:30 o'clock. Burial was made in the Green Camp cemetery.

Miss LaRue was born near Green Camp. About two years ago she contracted the fatal disease, from which she died. She was taken to an open-air sanatarium at Loomis, New York, where she remained for a year in an endeavor to regain her health. Last August she was removed to St. Anthony's hospital where she passed away Friday night.

The deceased is survived by three brothers, Benjamin and Delroy LaRue, of Marion, and Luther LaRue, of Knightstown, Indiana.

A marriage license has been issued to Miss Mabel E. Rowe and Mr. Dice C. Alexander.

THOUSANDS OF FISH FOR THE OHIO STREAMS

Conditions Are Very Favorable to Fish Propagation.

Hundreds of thousands of fish will be distributed by the state fish and game commission this fall in streams in every part of Ohio, assuring better sport to the thousands of followers of Isaak Walton in years to come.

"Conditions this fall are unusually favorable to fish," said State Fish and Game Commissioner Speaks Wednesday. "The heavy rains have kept the streams high and the waters sufficiently roiled to prevent many being caught. The fish will go into the winter well and their numbers should increase next spring.

"In our trips with the fish distributing car we have met encouragement from hundreds of people. Our hatcheries at London and Chagrin Falls are producing an unusual number of young fish, which will be put out this fall. Many of them will be big enough for use next year."

Mature fish, black and rock bass, are being brought from Lake Erie and bass, blue gills, catfish and croppies are being taken from the state hatcheries.

Fish law enforcement is being aided by good citizens all over the state, according to General Speaks.

JOHN W. SUPER DIES SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Suffers for Five Weeks from Dreaded Typhoid Fever.

John W. Super died on his thirty-ninth birthday at his home in Pleasant township, Sunday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock after a five weeks' illness of typhoid fever.

Mr. Super was born on the farm on which he died and has always resided there. He was married in October, 1896, to Miss Mary Mock, who died seven years ago. He is survived by one son and two daughters, Florence, Clyde and Ollie Super; his mother, Mrs. George Super, and six sisters, Mrs. Lucy Ferguson, of Prospect; Mrs. Fred Yeney, of Pleasant township; Mrs. E. B. Powell, Mrs. Maggie Rupp, Mrs. Charles Mumford and Miss Lydia Super, of Marion.

The deceased was a well-known farmer and a member of the Methodist church.

The funeral was held from the late home Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Burial was made in the Augenstine cemetery.

WITH TINY CASKET COVERED WITH BLOOM

Body of Little Eura May Russell Is Borne to Cemetery.

Covered with flowers sent by friends who loved her, the casket containing the remains of little Eura May Russell, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Russell, of Mt. Vernon avenue, was borne to its last resting place in the Marion cemetery, Monday morning.

The little tot was the neighborhood pet and four young women of the neighborhood acted as pall bearers. The floral offerings were many and beautiful and came from friends and acquaintances of the bereaved parents.

The services were conducted by C. B. Shull, of Columbus, at 10 o'clock. Short services were also held at the grave.

CHESTER HUNTSMAN DIES IN EVANSVILLE

Remains Were Brought to Marion for Burial.

Word was received here of the death of Chester Huntsman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Huntsman, of Perkins, Oklahoma, who died at Evansville, Indiana, Friday morning. Huntsman was about eighteen years of age and was employed at that place by his grandfather, D. Coleman, a contractor. He left here with his parents about six years ago.

The remains arrived here over the Big Four at noon Sunday and were taken to the John Postle home at No. 1117 north State street, where the funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The interment was made in the Marion cemetery.

CONFERENCE HELD BY TWO CHURCHES

But Little Business Taken Up at Meetings.

The quartely conference of the Epworth M. E. church was held in the pastor's study Monday morning at 8 o'clock. On account of the local-option campaign the attendance was small and no business of importance was transacted.

Routine business was given attention at the quarterly conference of the Wesley M. E. church, Saturday evening.

WILL MAKE FUTURE HOME IN TOLEDO

Mrs. Mollie Marshall and Mr. J. H. Marks Wed.

Mrs. Mollie Marshall, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. John H. Marks, of Toledo, at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, Thursday, October 19. Mr. and Mrs. Marks will reside in Toledo.

Contracts Are Let.

Contracts for three pike road improvements were let Monday by the county commissioners. The LaRue and Essex pike in Montgomery township was let to Fred Turner for $1,009.20; the Riley and Zeig pike in Green Camp township to A. J. Brady for $4,867.36, and the Sager and Irey pike in Green Camp township to W. C. Weeley for $1,314.

MORE BUILDINGS ARE ORDERED TORN DOWN

Structures Liable To Fire Regarded a Menace.

L. D. WILFORD IS FINISHING HIS WORK

A Number of New Orders Follow Those Received by Local Property Owners a Few Weeks Ago—Those Who Get Notices and Where the Old Buildings Are Located.

L. D. Wilford, assistant state fire marshal, who has been making an inspection in the city with a view to getting rid of the old buildings which are liable to fire and a menace to adjoining property, has issued a number of orders since those sent out about two weeks ago. The latest orders sent out are as follows:

The T. J. McMurray estate is required to tear down the sides of a frame shed at the rear of the Long livery barn, on north Main street, within thirty days, for the reason that the walls are in a dilapidated condition and liable to fire.

Two orders were served on Edward Fergus, one for the removal of an old shed and the other for the tearing down of a barn at the rear of his business rooms on north Main street.

A. D. Mitchell was served with two orders for the tearing down of two frame buildings, on north State street, within fifteen days. The buildings in question are located just south of the skating rink and the work of tearing them down is now in progress.

An old barn at the rear of the property of Miss Ella Breen, on north State street, is ordered torn down within thirty days.

L. W. Booth is given thirty days in which to tear down some old and dilapidated sheds at the rear of his business room, on north Main street.

Marion Lodge, No. 32, B. P. O. E., is ordered to tear down the two-story barn situated on the rear of the lodge property, on south State street.

A frame building at the rear of No. 118 east Church street, owned by the Fahey Real Estate company, is ordered to be torn down within thirty days.

Most people can have a lot of nice things said about them—by dying.

Here's a new Heater and it's far the best ever offered at any price—yet it costs no more than ordinary stoves

Globe Base Burner

If you were to search the world over you couldn't find another stove the equal of the Globe Base Burner. It has been tested out against all the well known makes of base burners, and it has them beaten to a frazzle for radiating heat and saving coal.

There Is No Stove That Burns So Little Fuel

This heater will pay for itself in a short time from the savings in coal. Put any stove you wish alongside the Globe and we'll heat the same space in far less time and won't begin to use as much coal as the other stove. We have never seen anything like this new Globe for throwing out heat. Even in the coldest days the Globe is not opened up like ordinary stoves—it must be kept in check at all times. If you place a Globe in your home you'll notice the greatest difference ever brought about in your heating—a scuttle of coal will go twice as far as you ever dreamed it could.

The Globe has triple exposed flues, a large hot air circulating system, and therefore more heat producing and heat radiating surface than any other base burner.

The Globe with its new system of radiating heat produces just about double the heating results of the ordinary base burner. There is only one base burner to buy after you've seen the test made—no matter how good a salesman the competing line might have, he couldn't induce you to take any but a Globe.

Now in justice to yourself, we ask that you call and see this new stove with its new air circulating and heat radiating features. We tell you it is different from anything on the market.

COME IN AND LET US SHOW YOU THE NEW GLOBE SYSTEM TODAY.

FRANK H. LEONARD OF CHRISTIAN SIENCE

An Able Address Is Delivered in the City.

THE SPEAKER GIVES GLIMPSES OF TRUTH

Mr. Leonard Is Introduced by Hon. Grant E. Mouser—Gathering Is Held in the Common Pleas Court-Room, Which Is Filled by Interested Auditors.

Frank H. Leonard C. S. B., of Chicago, a member of the board of lectureship of the Frst Church of Christ Scientist, of Boston, Massachusetts, gave a Christian Science lecture in the court-room, Thursday evening. He was heard by a very large crowd, over 200 extra chairs having been placed in the room to accommodate those wishing to hear the noted lecturer.

Hon. Grant E. Mouser introduced the speaker. Mr. Mouser spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Leonard and of the cause he represented. He made a pleasing introductory address.

Mr. Mouser said he was not a member of the Christian Science organization, but that he was personally acquainted with many of the men and women who are affiliated with it. They are some of the representative people of Marion and are people who are thinkers. He spoke of a wonderful case of healing that had come under his observation within the past couple of weeks and had caused him to do much thinking on the subject. While he did not understand the teaching of the doctrine he hoped to be enlightened by what the speaker would say, in the course of his talk.

Mr. Leonard then gave an eloquent address on "Christian Science." He is considered one of the greatest lecturers in the church and he expounded the truths of the science in a manner so simple that even those who were not followers in the faith were deeply impressed. In the course of the evening the speaker explained fully the teachings of the church.

Mr. Leonard said in part:

Ages ago Shakespeare wrote, "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." The world has looked upon this as indicating that a bad thing may be made good to one who thinks it good. I am convinced, however, that even unknown to himself, Shakespeare was having a glimpse of the great truth which even then was germinating in consciousness only waiting for recognition that it might begin its great work of salvation in the world, namely the knowledge that the source of all things is mind. While he did not know the distinction between divine mind and mortal mind, Shakespeare did realize the reason why "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so," is to be found in the fact that mind is the only thinker and creates thoughts; and all things whatsoever they may be are but thought externalized or manifested.

The mortal or carnal mind conception of all things is false and imperfect and it is because of this we seem to be surrounded on all sides with evil impurity and consequent corruption, decay, and death and we can rise out of and above this seeming turmoil and disaster only by turning away from the "fleeting and false" to the "enduring and true" which abide in the "Mind which was also in Christ Jesus" to become apparent to us as we obediently search for that same "Mind" unto the full recognition of the fact that the mind in Christ is God and therefore God is mind the thinker or creator of all things which really are.

In St. John we read, "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God," and in Genesis we read, "And God said, let us make the earth and the fullness thereof, and it was so. Let us make man, male and female, in our image, after our likeness, and it was so." And the thought of that divine perfect mind which God is created a man and universe perfect in quality even as the Creator Himself is perfect; for we may rest assured our Master never gave a command unto man beyond his ability to obey, and he said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect;" and when He gave that command for your guidance and mine he was turning us directly to the realization that it is right thinking which manifests good. Christian Science has come into the world apparently teaching a new something while really it is simply emphasizing the fact that the word is God, is infinite and is good.

We may safely and certainly base all the ills "the flesh is heir to" on the human inability to discern "the signs of the times."

We read of the wonderful happenings of the times of Jesus, wish they might be possible now and then accept the universal belief that the time for miracles has gone by. To say the time has gone by for the power of the word to be manifested is literally "taking the name of the Lord in vain," for he said, "Lo, I am with you always."

Webster defines a miracle as "anything wonderful." What Jesus did was in direct opposition to what we term natural law, but instead of our accepting and clinging, as we have, to so-called natural law as the real law, we should recognize that no law is natural or normal save that which manifests in all ways and on all occassions good or God. What Jesus did was not supernatural from the basis of real or God naturalness but in full accord with all the promises in the Bible as to the redemptive accomplishment of acceptance of his work as the direct manifestation of the omnipresent power of the word.

The realization of the infinite power of the word brings to us absolute confidence that when we speak the word of God, it is always with authority and power; and that the besetting sin of the sons of men is their lethargic attitude of unillumined indifference toward anything which seeks to turn them from this negative attitude toward the "things of God" unto the mental alertness which reveals "the deep things of God" and literally brings God's kingdom "in earth, as is in heaven."

We do not need to pray to God to take sin from us and give us good, for God is good and we already have him. We need to pray that we may be delivered from the belief that God ever sent evil; from the belief that the perfect can ever become imperfect and the eternal, temporal.

We must accustom ourselves to reasoning out the things of spirit and cease believing they are hidden from us until after the change which we call death. The things of spirit are eternal and it is as much eternity now as it ever will be, so now is the time when we are to worship God "in spirit and in truth" and cease giving willing ear to the cry of carnal mind which is at war with spirit and is death unto any possible knowledge of God.

The Bible teaches "be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind" and this means we are to be changed in substance by beginning again in mind.

Jesus the Christ transcended all material belief and theory when he healed the sick with the word of God and yet he said, "I can of mine own self do nothing," indicating it was the "Mind" in him, the Father, God, which did the works.

The world at large has had great misapprehension as to the position accorded to Mrs. Eddy by the Christian Scientists.

They have never loked upon her as a creator but simply as a revelator who through consecration, self-abnegation and profound spiritual searching of the scriptures, discerned the great truth of the life "hid with Christ in God" which she transcribed in the Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," so simply that any one who is willing to study may comprehend and know the "Truth" which makes man free.

Christian Science is not Mrs. Eddy's science, it is Christ's science or Christ's eternal continuity, presence, and activity manifested in works as well as words, teaching us that only as we intelligently know and have righteous faith in him and prove it by demonstration, have we become as little children accepting the kingdom of heaven which is "within."

It is love that establishes in earth His kingdom as it is in heaven. It is Love rightly understood that establishes the universal brotherhood of man, wherein there is no way, no will, and no law save God's.

And it is this love manifested through Christian Science which has drawn Jew, Gentile, Pagan, Agnostic, and Atheist unto Christ through lifting him "up from the earth" into the realm of spiritual reality and consciousness, wherein God is worshipped "in spirit and in truth."

The Christian Science text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mrs. Eddy's legacy to suffering and sin-sick humanity, enables one to find the spiritual truths in the Bible, simplifies and elucidates their teachings and makes practical the example of our Master while on earth. It does not supercede nor does it take the place of the Bible, but makes it more desired and studied than ever before.

The message of Christian Science to mortals is the message of hope, the mesage of activity and the message of joy. It is the glad tidings that at last we know how to worship God and how to "Walk in the spirit" that we may not fulfil "the lust of the flesh" but "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" "For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory forever."

YOUNG PEOPLE ARE JOINED IN MARRIAGE

Miss Anna Marie Rice and Mr. Harley N. Lyon.

The marriage of Miss Anna Marie Rice and Mr. Harley N. Lyon was celebrated at the Epworth M. E. parsonage, at 7 o'clock Thursday evening, Rev. C. R. Havighurst performing the marriage rites in the presence of Miss Inez Rice, a sister of the bride, and Miss Mabel Fell.

The young people came over from the bride's home at Caledonia by auto and immediately after the ceremony drove to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Hinds, of Pearl street, where a wedding dinner was served.

The bride is an accomplished young woman of pleasing personality, and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon B Rice. The groom is a young man with the best of prospects in life, and he and his bride are held in the highest regard by a multitude of friends. Mr. Lyon has been identified with the Ohio Tractor company and a company interested in the development of Canadian lands as a tractor expert during the past year. He will, however, turn his attention to farming in Marion county in the future and with his bride will reside in a comfortable home which he is building north of Caledonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyon left Friday evening for a wedding journey. They will make their home in this city during the winter, and will move to the farm in the early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Clark, of Avondale avenue, are the parents of a daughter born October 27.

A son was recently born to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Keil, of south Seffner avenue.

INTERESTING FIGURES AS TO LAST CENSUS

The Population of the County and Its Divisions.

FALLING OFF IN THE RURAL POPULATION

The Population of the Villages and Townships—The Advance Bulletin Issued by the Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor at Hand.

The advance bulletin issued by the census bureau of the department of commerce and labor contains some interesting data relative to the population of the various townships, cities and villages in Marion county. The bulletin has just been issued by E. Dana Durand, director of the department.

The population of the city of Marion at the last census of 1910 is given at 18,232. In 1900 the population is given at 11,862 and ten years previous at 8,327, showing a gain of 3,535 between the years of 1890 and 1900 and a gain of 6,370 between the latter date and the last census.

In the wards the population at the last census is as follows: First, 4,182 Second, 4,157; Third, 6,273, and Fourth, 3,320.

The total population of Marion county is given at 33,971, a gain of 5,293 over that of ten years ago, when it was given at 28.678, or 18.5 per cent. increase. The population at that time was a gain of 3,951 over that of 1890, when it was 24,727, or sixteen per cent. increase.

Figures relative to the population in the villages of the county at the last census, in 1900 and in 1890 are given respectively as follows:

Caledonia, 562, 682, 757; Green Camp, 308, 369, 290; LaRue, 772, 997, 948; New Bloomington, 304, 399, ——; Prospect, 945, 983, 830; Morral, 331, ——, ——; Waldo, 319, 278, 151.

The population in the various townships at the last census, in 1900 and in 1890 is given respectively as follows:

Big Island, 1,016, 1,342, 1,471; Bowling Green, 725, 978, 1,093; Claridon, including Caledonia village, 1,526, 1,752, 1,717; Grand, 360, 199, 514; Grand Prairie, 518, 502, 460; Green Camp, including Green Camp village, 957, 1,131, 1,147; Marion, including Marion city, 20.213, 13,222, 9,158; Montgomery, including LaRue and New Bloomington villages, 1,920, 2,322, 2,243; Pleasant, 1,082, 1,109, 1,077; Prospect, including Prospect village, 1,731, 1,833, 1,767; Richland, 958, 1,021, 1,124; Salt Rock, including Morral village, 721, 619, 639; Scott, 523, 549, 575; Tully, 808, 877, 898; Waldo, including Waldo village, 912, 922, 846.

Some interesting maps are supplied in the bulletin showing that Marion county stands well with the other counties of the state in population.

There is a falling off in the rural population of the county amounting to 6.4 per cent. The population a square mile in the total population is given at the last census at 83.1 and the rural population is given at 38.5 a square mile. The land area of the county is given at 409 square miles.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is proof:

August Christman, 813 S. Walnut street, Bucyrus, Ohio, says: "For five years I suffered severely from backache. I am obliged to stand a great deal and I attribute my kidney trouble to this. I was also subject to headaches and generally felt miserable. A friend, knowing of my suffering, advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I procured a box. I was surprised at the quick relief I received and after taking them a day or so, I was able to work without being bothered by pain in my back." (From statement gvien in 1904.)

TESTED AND PROVEN.

On November 29, 1907, Mr. Christman said: "My health has been splendid since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I therefore can reiterate every word I previously said in their praise. I am glad to give my name as an endorser of Doan's Kidney Pills."

WATCH TREE CANKERS IN THE APPLE ORCHARD

Dying Branches Call for Close Examination.

APPLE GROWERS ARE GIVEN A WARNING

How Trees Suffering of Canker Are Treated—The Use of White Lead and Asphaltum in Covering Wounds on Trees—The Manner of Pruning and Dressing.

There is apparently urgent need for early recognition of certain branch diseases known as cankers in the apple orchards of Ohio, and for prompt preparation to deal with them. Where dying branches occur, the cause of local death should be learned; if from a local dead area with roughened dead bark one may feel reason to suspect apple canker. If at the same time dead pruning stubs from other years are found surrounded by an area of dead bark or wood, then such infection of the pruning wounds would indicate the prevalence of this disease. The spores of the canker fungi are carried by such agencies as wind, rain, etc. Between now and next March is the proper time to seek out the cankers and prepare for their destruction; better results are promised by early fall removal. While picking apples keep eyes open for these contagious diseases

Three forms of canker are quite frequent over the state and one of these, the blister canker, has been found by the experiment station to be exceedingly abundant especially upon bearing orchards in southern and eastern Ohio. The black-rot canker forms are known and all are being studied. All forms are shown by death of the bark and threaten the life of the bearing orchard; they are in a way to inflict heavy losses if neglected. Blister canker seems to enter through wounds which are unprotected. To meet canker, early pruning and burning of dying branches and removal of canker spots on living trunks and branches are urged. The diseased bark, etc., from such spots must be burned if spores are to be destroyed and infection reduced.

The Treatment.

The treatment of apple orchard cankers involves also the treatment of large wounds or pruning wounds as well as those caused immediately by the removal of cankers. Dead limbs will require to be cut off close to the trunk or large branch. The same applies in all pruning. No dead stub should remain to open the way for further infection.

Where local cankers with bark dead to the wood are discovered upon branches or trunks, or in crotches, the dead bark should be removed with a chisel, drawing knife, or other suitable instrument back to the sound, healthy, living tissue. When these surfaces, such as those caused by the sawing off of branches, or by shaving off all cankered tissue, have become free from moisture and the surface is dry they should be treated with metled asphalt or asphaltum; the branches should be removed and the bark from cankers should be promptly burned to destroy the spores of the fungus. When pruning in the fall, it will be easy to secure the dry surfaces spoken of, usually without preparatory dressing. At times when trouble arises from moisture the freshly cut wounds may be covered temporarily with white lead paint or linseed oil and Venetian-red, and later treated. Permanent covering of all wounds is required to protect from infection by wound parasites.

Dressing for Trees.

The asphaltum to be used for dressing has a high melting point, running from 250 degrees to 285 degrees, or even 300 degrees Fahrenheit. This is carefuly melted until thoroughly liquid, necessarily in a metal vessel, and then in this condition is applied by means of a short brush, swab or stiff broom to the surface one desires to cover. When freely liquid a thin coating is run over the surface—this may be increased by a second coating after the first has partly cooled. Of course, the asphaltum should be put over on the edge of the live tissues, which will usually not be injured if the asphaltum is of the right grade. Asphaltum of low melting point which has been thinned with benzine, such as coal tar or regular roofing paints, will injure the living tissue underneath the bark.

The best grades of asphaltum we know at present for this purpose are for sale by the Wells Oil Refining company, of Columbus, by the Cleveland Trinidad Paving company, Cleveland, Texas asphalt, and by Byerly & Sons, Cleveland. This is put in drums or barrels weighing 350 to 400 pounds and is not sold in smaller quantities. It will cost from one and one-fourth to one and one-half cents a pound f. o. b. at place of shipment, but at this price is much cheaper than the expensive white lead paints, grafting wax, or compositions of tallow and rosin which might otherwise be used. Where asphaltum can not well be obtained a rosin and tallow mixture may be serviceable.

Communications with respect to apple cankers and their treatment may be addressed to the Department of Botany, experiment station, Wooster.

OBSERVE LAW, SHOUTS TAFT

President, Fighting Mad, Upholds Anti-Trust Law.

STRIKES HARD BLOW AT BIG COMBINES

Time Has Come To Enforce the Statutes.

With His Sentences Coming Fast and Vigorous, Taft Responds to "Baiting" Speech of Martin Littleton in Pittsburgh, and Shows Law Violators Where Uncle Sam Will Take a Hand in Affairs.

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 1.—There was rejoicing in the Taft camp today and the president was congratulated over his "victory" last night, also there was no little indignation over what the Taft supporters declared was a deliberate "baiting" of the president by the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce. Before an audience that included perhaps hundreds of Pittsburgh millionaires and at least 150 minor officials of the steel trust subsidiaries, the president was forced to sit while he heard Representative Martin W. Littleton, Democrat, of New York, denounce the Sherman anti-trust law and demand its repeal.

It had been a long evening of tiresome speeches up to that time, and when Littleton concluded with a burst of oratory, the president had but nineteen minutes to the time his train was scheduled to leave Pittsburgh and for the first time since he became president, Taft "got mad" right out in public. Realizing that he was being butchered to make a Pittsburgh holiday he went right after Littleton's argument. Scarcely a sound of applause greeted him as he arose Pittsburgh business men feeling that he had been subdued But with more vigor than he had ever put into public utterance the president defended the law with his face suffused and his huge body swinging from side to side; he swung his fists at the Pittsburghers and told them they must obey the law Littleton had said that the law was indefinite and the president, shaking his big fist at the long rows of business men shouted.

All Men Know.

"The law has been on the statute book twenty years It has been construed and constructed by the supreme court. I have had myself, when on the bench, an opportunity to consider its purpose and its effect, and two decisions were rendered last spring which are epoch-making and which in my judgment give definite meaning to that statute. They are there, and you will find them, if you will search through the language of the speech of the gentleman you have just heard. That any combination in restraint of trade with the purpose and effect to control prices, stifle or suppress competition, or establish a monopoly is a violation of the statute. I say the supreme court put into that the purpose and I am talking to men who understand business and I am talking to intelligent men, and I know what I am talking about, when I say that men know whether they intend to stifle competition. men know whether they intend to establish a monopoly' Men know whether they are trying to control prices

The president's face grew red, his sentences flowed fast and vigorous and his breath came in short gasps. The 1,900 Pittsburghers leaned forward eagerly to see the president in a fighting mood. He hurried to Littleton who sat at the table with him, and waving his arms about his head, flail-like, he almost screamed

Enforce the Law.

My friend, Brother Littleton, offers what! Does he offer anything but a repeal of this statute and then an enactment of another statute which is to be subject to the same construction and to put in a form of federal incorporation. I am in favor of federal incorporation, but that is no reason for repealing this statute Let us enforce the statute, and then let the parts into which these trusts that were formed for these illegal purposes go into the federal incorporation act and receive the protection that they are entitled to if they follow the law. There is only one course open to us, gentlemen and I say that with all the sincerity I can command, either we are going to have individualism and a freedom from these combinations that suppress competition, that control prices, and that establish a monopoly, or else we are going on to the point where the people will demand that the power which these few men are going to retain in their hands shall not be further exercised by them, but that it shall be transferred to the government, and then we will have state Socialism. I know I am speaking against the leaning of most of these gentlemen. I can not help it. The law is on the statute book I believe it is a just law

The main point is that the law has got to be enforced, and this stifling of competition, this establishing of monopolies, this arrangement to control prices must cease, or we must deliver over to the gentlemen who have it in their hands to run the entire business of the country, or, and then, the final step, turn it over to the government to fix prices and to fix compensation for every one and we will have a Socialistic republic".

A Just Statute.

The big form of the president shaking with emotion, leaned forward over the table. The veins on his forehead stood out like taut cords and he rattled the dishes before him as he pounded the table with his big fist

Littleton had declared that it was practically impossible to prove intent to violate the Sherman law

"No man within the sound of my voice but knows," shouted the president. "if he is in a business that makes a contract with his competitor, whether he is trying to control prices, whether he is trying to stifle competition, or establish a monopoly, and that intent is just as easily proven by the circumstances as possible Can you tell me any business corporation that has been punished by that statute that ought not to have been? Tell me those before you tell me how difficult business is. Show me where the statute has worked unjustly. You can not do it if your purpose was honest and innocent and you only increased your corporation as much as possible, and you pursued the methods that are known to honest business, without attempt to drive out competitors without an attempt to control prices, you can go on and make your business as large as you choose I say with great deference to my friend, Mr Littleton, that his remedy is only to abolish this statute, and give us another one just as difficult of construction, and what are you going to do with those who are now under indictment or under the decree of the court? Are you going to abolish that statute and let them go back in? Gentlemen, the proposition, with great deference seems to me can not justify itself"

The president came to Morgantown to participate in the inauguration of Thomas Hodges as president of the University of West Virginia.

INVENTOR KILLED IN FALL FROM GLIDER

California Aviator Dies After Three Hours of Suffering.

San Jose, Nov. 1 Professor John Montgomery inventor of a type of aeroplane, and an electrical expert, was killed while experimenting with a new glider of which he expected great things. He lost control of the machine and fell about 40 feet. He lived for three hours and was conscious. Montgomery had been at work along the same lines as the Wrights to make flying safe and with his glider he went to the foothills about five miles south of this city to conduct his experiments in private.

SWEETHEARTS GO TO DEATH

Mystery Surrounds Motive of a Wooster Pair.

ROMANCE COMES TO TRAGIC END

Pretty Orphan and Dancing Man Found Dead.

Death of Girl, Who Dies in Her Room, Is Followed Soon by the Finding of Lover's Body in Cemetery, Both Dying Soon After Leaving Halloween Party in Dancing Master's Hall.

Wooster, O. Nov 1 -Mystery surrounds the motive in the suspected suicide of Miss Carmen Humphrey, which was followed by that of her fiance, Rufus Billiard Coroner King is trying to find what causes led to the tragic ending of their romance.

Miss Humphrey, nineteen, and a pretty orphan, lived with Mrs. Leo Matz. Billiard, twenty-two, in addition to his regular employment, conducted a dancing school evenings

The couple's courtship had extended over a year and Miss Humphrey was wearing a diamond engagement ring.

Last evening, she was with Billiard at his dancing school She could not dance, but watched him conduct his class. Some of her friends think that, seeing him dance with others, grieved her, but she did not show any such feeling

After the school—which was a Halloween party— was dismissed, the two had lunch at a restaurant, then he escorted her home.

Sees Girl Die.

After they parted she went to her room where Mrs. Matz heard her singing Shortly afterward she screamed, and Mrs Matz found her unconscious in convulsions. She called physicians and young Billiard The young man arrived in time to see his sweetheart die

Billiard remained with her body until 5:30 a m, then went home and ate breakfast Shortly afterward he left the house At 9 o'clock two women walking through the Wooster cemetery found his body Beside him was a strychnine bottle

Later a suspicious looking white powder was found in Miss Humphrey's handbag

In a notebook Billiard had written:

"Dear mother Forgive me for this Bury us together. Rufus"

The cemetery lot on which Billiard suicided was the one in which Miss Humphrey's mother is buried and where Miss Humphrey was to be interred in case she died single or a resident of Wooster. Billiard knew this and it is thought that he hunted up the lot to make sure his mother would understand that he wanted to be laid to rest with his fiencee

A regular meeting of the Red Men was held, Tuesday evening, with a good attendance The next meeting will be held next week.

BOSTON JURY INDICTS DIVINE

Richeson Held on First Degree Murder Counts.

DOCUMENT VERY COMPREHENSIVE

Case in Municipal Court To Be Dropped.

The Bill Returned by Grand Jury Cites Every Possible Means That Might Have Been Employed by Alleged Slayer To Place Deadly Drug in Hands of Trusting Girl. Position of Prosecution.

Boston, Nov. 1.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge, was indicted by the grand jury for the death of Miss Avis Linnell of Hyannisport, on Oct 14. The indictment is for murder in the first degree and consists of five counts. It is charged that the girl's death was due to taking a cyanide of potassium powder given to her by the preacher.

The bill is of unusual length because of the number of counts, and is intended to cover every method by which Richeson could have conveyed the poison to the girl It indicates that the police have not succeeded in securing evidence which will show conclusively that the clergyman met Miss Linnell on the day of her death, and that the authorities do not know how the poison reached her between Tuesday night, Oct. 10, when Richeson is alleged to have purchased cyanide of potassium, and Saturday night, Oct. 14, when Miss Linnell died from a dose of the poison

Richeson was not present when the jury reported, but a copy of the indictment will be served upon him in his cell at the Charles street jail today He will be called upon within a day or two to plead to the indictment and a date for the commencement of his trial will be fixed This will probably be early in January Richeson was to have been married to Miss Violet Edmands of Brookline, but after his arrest the invitations were recalled

Richeson was out of jail for about 45 minutes when he came before Judge Murray of the municipal court, upon his continued hearing. He drove to the courthouse in a van with a lot of other prisoners and took his place in the dock with about 20 "drunks" Very few in the courtroom recognized him He was pale and drawn, apparently having lost considerable flesh When the clerk called his name Richeson stood up, and probably did not hear the few words addressed to him unless his hearing is very acute The clerk waved his hand at the clergyman, who sank back in his seat and quickly left the dock Almost every one in the room was still waiting to see the accused man, when Phillip R Dunbar, his counsel, hurriedly left. A reporter overtook the lawyer and learned from him that the case had been continued until Nov. 7. On that date no further action will be taken, because Richeson is no longer in the jurisdiction of the municipal court.

DEATH COMES MIDST MUSIC

Crime Interferes with the Halloween Festivities.

INDIANA GIRL SHOT BY LOVER

Panic Ensues Among Crowd of Revelers.

While Merry Music of Two-Step Sounds in Muncie Dance Hall at Midnight, a Jealous Youth Slays Pretty Telephone Operator Who Refuses To Wed Him—Another Girl Shot at Vincennes.

Muncie, Ind, Nov 1 - While merry music of the two-step was sounding in an uptown dance hall at midnight last night, and the happy crowd of Halloween revelers in fantastic costumes were whirling about the floor, Charles McGalliard, twenty-two, a painter, shot to death his fiancee, Alta Hayworth, twenty, a pretty telephone operator. He took his arm from about the girl in the dance long enough to fire at her with a revolver and she sank to the floor, dying immediately with a bullet through her heart. Then McGalliard tried to kill himself, but was overpowered and disarmed by the other dancers

Panic ensued in the hall, and several were slightly injured in getting out of the way McGalliard confessed and made a written statement to the police, saying jealousy was the cause of his act McGalliard said the girl promised last Sunday night to marry him, and he had an engagement with her for Halloween, which she failed to keep. When he found her in the hall, they danced together several times. When he insisted on her leaving and going home with him she refused, and in a fit of jealous rage he shot her, the bullet plowing through her body and going through a window glass in the hall.

Both young people are members of respected families and McGalliard never was in trouble before The prisoner is in a serious condition from nervous collapse today.

Other Escapades.

Vincennes, Ind, Nov 1 —One girl is dying and two young persons are seriously injured, as a result of Halloween escapades here last night.

Josephine Kapps, twenty, was shot fatally in the abdomen, and her sister, Katherine, was wounded in the arm when a shotgun in the hands of Fred a younger brother, was discharged accidentally. They are the children of Joseph Kapps, a well-to-do farmer, and were returning home late from a masked party

While trying to unmask one of a crowd of vandals near his home, Guy McDonald, sixteen, was stabbed four times, his cheek bone being bared. His assailant was not identified

BANDITS FAIL TO GET BOOTY

When Train Is Held Up Near Memphis.

TWO MEN ONLY FIGURE IN PLOT

Robbers Blow Wrong Safe and Miss Cash.

After Holding Up the Train by Flagging It, the Robbers Board Express Car—Messenger Is Bound and Gagged and Engineer Forced To Back His Train Onto a Siding. The Details

Memphis, Tenn Nov 1 -One of the boldest train robberies in the history of the Southwest was attempted near here early today when two men held up the express train on the Oklahoma & Gulf division of the Rock Island railroad and after successfully gaining entrance to the express car, sought to blow the safe which was known to contain $500,000 The robbers, however, blew a smaller safe, which contained nothing, and then fled without tampering with the strongbox containing a fortune

It was at first believed that the robbers had been entirely successful in their undertaking and the report was sent out that the express car had been looted. It is believed the robbers had received information of the great amount of money being carried as their attempted robbery was well timed.

After holding up the train by flagging, they immediately boarded the express car. The messenger was bound and gagged and the engineer forced to back his train into a siding. The safe which the robbers believed contained $500,000 was then blown and the robbers dropped from the train and fled

After the first alarm had been sent out, stating that the express car had been robbed, the crew returned to the train, released the bound messenger and then discovered that the robbers had blown the wrong safe

Posses started in pursuit of the robbers but failed to find any trace of them

YUAN SHI KAI MADE PREMIER

He Will Attempt To End All Hostilities.

A UNION WITH THE REBELS PLANNED

With a View to Bringing Peace to Empire.

The Emperor Having Surrendered Power by Monday's Edict, Yuan's Elevation to Premiership, If He Succeeds in Ending Rebellion, Will Make Him Virtual Ruler of China. Peasants Reported Butchered.

Pekin, Nov 1.--Yuan Shi Kai followed up the announcement of his appointment as premier of China today with a brief statement of the policy he intends to pursue.

The premier's first act, he says, will be to cease hostilities against the rebels immediately. Then he will open negotiations with General Li Yuan Hung, the revolutionist commander, who recently proclaimed himself president of China, with a view to reestablishing permanent peace.

Practically, Yuan's plan contemplates a union between the government and the rebels. Whether the rebels will accept his overtures, however, is an open question They have shown no signs yet of abandoning the revolution on the strength of the emperor's promises, and Yuan is known to be out of favor with them for having accepted office under the Manchu dynasty.

The emperor having surrendered practically all power by his edict of last Monday, Yuan's elevation to the premiership, if he succeeds in terminating the rebellion, will make him virtual ruler of China, of course, subject to the parliament, which the emperor is pledged to call.

Other cabinet appointments await the premier's selections

While Yuan is busy with his negotiations with the rebels he has asked that some one be delegated to look after the premiership for him and prince Ching, the recently-deposed premier, has been assigned to the task.

If he can not secure an interview with General Li in any other way Yuan says he will visit the latter's headquarters in Wu Chang. The trip will be attended with considerable peril.

Country Is Plundered.

Peking, Nov 1. - News today that imperialist soldiers are plundering the country and butchering the peasants north of Hankow is taken to mean that the fighting in Hankow itself is over, the rebels were victorious and that the imperialists are scattered and fleeing There is no news direct from Hankow, all wires still being down and the railroad out of commission.

The situation here grows hourly more threatening. Now that the whole of the northern Chinese troops have joined the Army league and refused service unless the league's demands are complied with, the throne is completely without protection except for the Manchu soldiery, which is so far outnumbered by the Chinese that they could not long resist a concerted attack.

To complicate matters further, the Army league's demands conflict with those of the rebels, so that in case the former is satisfied, the latter's enmity will only be intensified. Revolutionists in Pekin boldly demanded today the mustering out even of the Manchu troops. To do so would leave the emperor without even a palace guard.

Old Cabinet Quits.

The old Manchu cabinet resigned today and a new one is being formed. Yuan Shi Kai, it is taken for granted, will be premier. He has just telegraphed from the south that he intends negotiating with the rebels, but is evidently having trouble to get in touch with the leaders. The revolutionists strongly disapprove of his acceptance of an office under a Manchu government, and he is unlikely to find them very friendly towards himself.

The American residents in Peking and their countrymen who have sought refuge here from neighboring cities are holding a meeting at the legation today to consider measures for their protection.

All agree that the legation's hospitality should be extended to the baby emperor should he seek refuge with the Americans, which, in an emergency, it is practically certain he will do.

The members of Marion Temple, No 281, Pythian Sisters, entertained their husbands and friends at a Halloween social in the lodge hall, Tuesday evening. Nearly all present were dressed appropriately to the occasion and the costumes afforded much enjoyment. Following a march, music and a progressive euchre contest were enjoyed, and, after a luncheon, the remainder of the evening was passed in dancing.

Owing to a social in the hall next Tuesday evening, the regular meeting of the Pythian Sisters will be held next Monday evening.

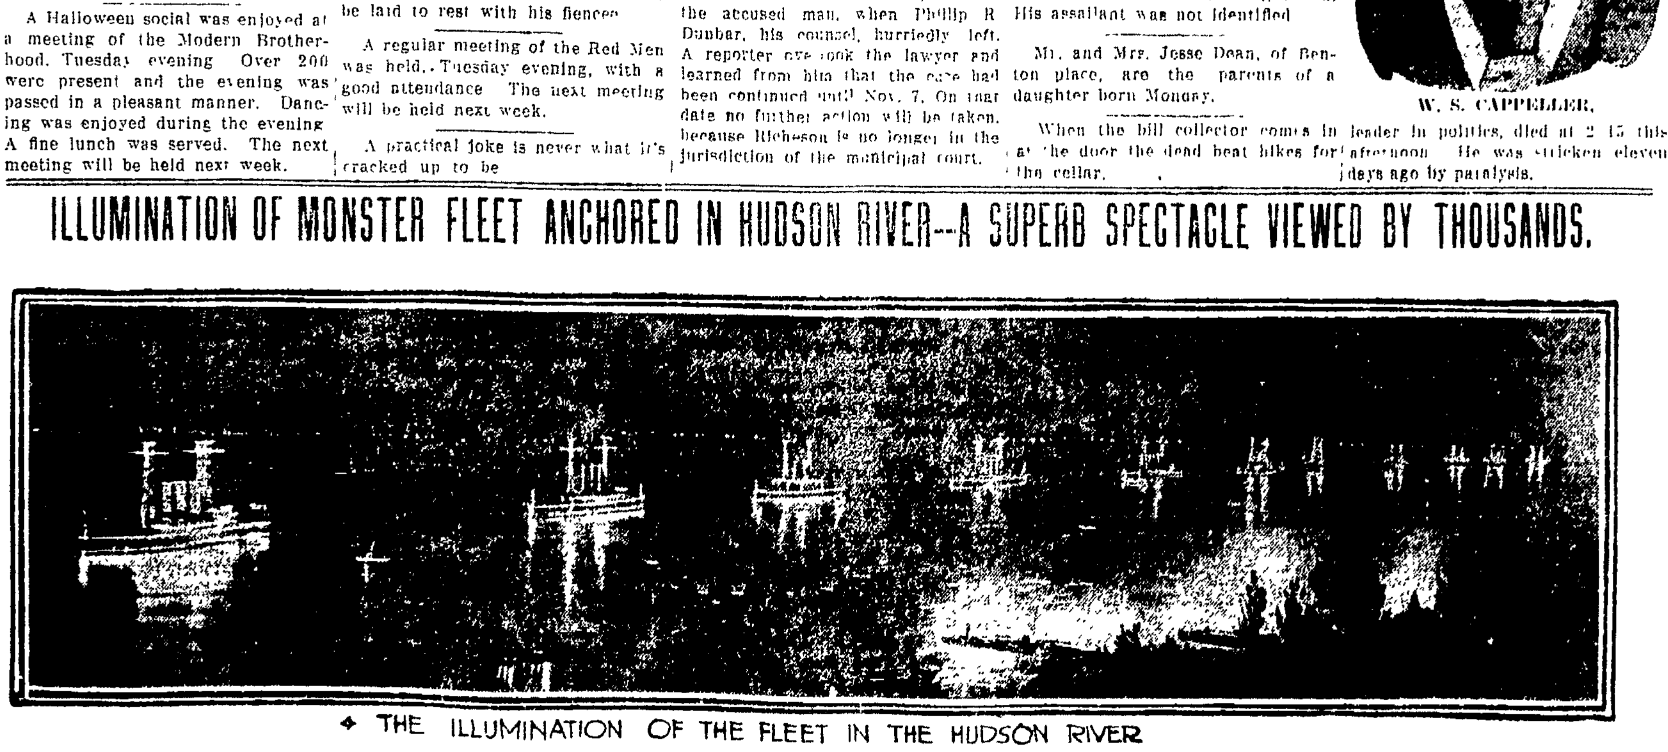
ILLUMINATION OF MONSTER FLEET ANCHORED IN HUDSON RIVER--A SUPERB SPECTACLE VIEWED BY THOUSANDS.



◆ THE ILLUMINATION OF THE FLEET IN THE HUDSON RIVER

Outlined in a blaze of incandescent glory against the inky blackness of the night, the battle ships of the fleet anchored in the North River presented a spectacle so superb as to exhaust the superlatives of the thousands of men, women and children who jammed Riverside Drive during the hours of the display. Stretching away for twenty miles like a fiery comet, they looked like phantom vessels embroidered in live coals on a background of jet. It was a sight never to be forgotten by those who witnessed it.

Beautiful New Dress Goods

An Immense Showing Of The Newest & Best The World Has To Offer

No store in Marion ever showed such immense assortments No store ever offered such high quality fabrics at such low prices We show hundreds of the most beautiful new patterns in Fall and Winter dress goods that have been produced this season—French and storm serge mixtures broadcloths and worsteds in every new and desirable color The time to buy is now hesitation may make you miss these many extraordinary money saving opportunities but while about it get enough for your Fall and Winter dresses

The Reason You Should Buy Now

Telling How We Can Afford To Sell For 1-3 Less Than Other Stores

Some time ago the manufacturers reduced the prices on wool dress goods to be ready for the reduction the low tariff was bound to make We anticipated this decline and bought late thus we are able to offer you the newest and best Fall and Winter dress fabrics at much lower prices than you would have to pay elsewhere but it is positive that after we sell the goods now in stock these prices cannot be repeated The values are too great and what is more it would be impossible for even the big Store to secure more at the prices for which these were obtained

Manhattan Clothing Co Going Out of Business.

This store was started twenty years ago by Ed Staiger and two associates. Mr Staiger has been the sole managing partner for a number of years, and his health is so poor he is compelled to get out of the clothing business We have been trying for some time to find a buyer, but buyers with money enough to take over a stock of this size are scarce and hard to find Last Saturday we started a closing out sale Our entire stock of men's and boy's clothing and furnishing goods is marked down to actual wholesale cost or less. New goods at cost Unseasonable goods at considerably less than cost It will pay you to supply your present needs and to anticipate future needs if you have the money to invest at present We were not able to wait on everybody last Saturday, but we will have more extra help this Saturday and hope to be better able to wait on customers No goods charged No goods on approval Nothing but cash goes, but your money will be cheerfully refunded if purchase should not prove to be satisfactory in every respect
